Norton

Thomas Norton emigrated from Ockley, Surrey County, England to America in 1639, and in September of that year settled, with the other original settlers, at Guilford, Connecticut.

As he is supposed to be descended from the Nortons of Sharpenhow, Bedfordshire, England, the following list of one line of his descendants is prefaced by, first, a portion of an Article on the "Norton Family" published in the New England Historical and Genealogical Register, volume 13, pages 225 to 232; and second, by a short description of the settlement and settlers of Guilford, Conn.

FIRST:

"The Pedigree of the Norton Family, taken from the original documents in the possession of Charles Eliot Norton" (after stating by whom kept, and how and when, continues as follows, viz:)

1. Le Seigneur De Norville (name is derived from north village) came into England with William the Conqueror, and was his Constable. He married into the House of Valois.
2. Sr. De Norville, married into the house of Barr.
3. Sr. De Norville, married into the house of Delbemonte.
4. Sr. De Norville, married Aueline, daughter of Nevil of Raby.

5. Sr. De Norville, married Joricia, daughter of Sr. Dampre de Court.
6. Sr. De Norville, alias Norton, married the daughter of Sr. John Hadscoke.
7. Sr. De Norville, alias Norton, married the daughter and co-heiress of Monsigneur Bassingbourne, and had a daughter Elizabeth, and a son John⁸.
8. Sir John Norton, alias Norville, married a daughter of Lord Grey de Ruthyn, by whom he had John⁹, Joan, and Katherine.
9. John Norton of Sharpenhow, Bedfordshire, England, married _____ and had John¹⁰, Jane, Isable and Alice.
10. John Norton, of Sharpenhow, married 1st, daughter of Mr. Danie, and had William, who died young. Married 2nd, Jane, daughter of John Cowper, and had Thomas, Richard¹¹, Robert, John, Alice and William.
11. Richard Norton, of Sharpenhow, married Margery, daughter of Wingar of Sharpenhow, and had Thomas and William¹².
12. William Norton of Sharpenhow, married 1st, Margerie, daughter of Will Hawes, and Widow of Mr. Hamon, and had William. Married 2nd, Dennis Cholmley (or Chelmsby) niece to Sir Nicholas Hare, Master of the Rolls; had Thomas (who went to Surrey County, shortly after his marriage, and is supposed to be the Guilford, Conn. emigrant of that name), John, Elizabeth, Francis, Hugh, Daniel, Phoebe and Richard''.

SECOND.

GUILFORD, CONNECTICUT.

Guilford was settled in 1639, by a company of Puritans, from Surrey and Kent Counties, England; under the leadership of Rev. Henry Whitfield, who with William Leete, afterward Governor of the Province, Thomas Norton, and at least twenty-two others, some with families, others with none, set sail from London, England, on May 20th, 1639, for the New World.

They styled themselves the Guilford Company; and on the first day of June, 1639, while on ship board, the little band signed a "plantacon" covenant, in which they expressed the purpose to settle near Quinnipiack (New Haven).

The covenant so signed reads as follows:

COVENANT.

We, whose names are hereunder written, intending by God's gracious permission, to plant ourselves in New England, and if it may be, in the southerly part, about Quinnipiack:

We do faithfully promise, each to each, for ourselves and families and those that belong to us; that we will, the Lord assisting us, sit down and join together in one entire plantation; and to be helpful each to the other in every common work, according to every man's ability, and as need shall require; and we promise not to desert or leave each other or the plantation but with the consent of the rest, or the greater part of the Company, who have entered into this agreement.

As for our gathering together in a church way, and the choice of officers and members to be joined together in that way, we do refer ourselves until such time as it shall please God to settle us in our plantation.

In witness whereof we subscribe our names, the First day of June, 1639.

Robert Kitchell, William Plane, Francis Bushnell, Francis Chatfield, John Hughes, William Leete, Thomas Naish, John Parmelin, John Jurdon, Henry Doude, Henry Whitfield, John Stone, John Bishop, Abraham Cruttenden, Richard Guttridge, William Chittenden, Thomas Norton, William Halle, William Dudley, Thomas Joanes, Henry Kingsnorth, John Mephram, William Stone, Thomas Cooke, John Hoadley."

Between the 10th and 15th of July, 1639, they entered New Haven harbor; their ships—for they had two—being the first vessels that had entered it.

After landing at New Haven, measures were immediately taken to find a suitable location for the Company. After careful search, they decided upon "Menunkatuck"; to this they subsequently gave the name of Guilford, after the county seat of Surrey County, England, where many of them had lived.

The original town included the present towns of Madison and Guilford, and stretched along the coast of Long Island Sound, from Branford to Killingworth, a distance of nine or ten miles in a straight line, and extending back from the Sound about the same distance.

The whole of the original town was originally inhabited by Indians, who called the western part of it, Menunkatuck.

The part of the township, which embraces nearly all the present town of Guilford, was purchased of the Sachem-squaw of Menunkatuck, Shaumpishuh, September 29th, 1639, by Henry Whitfield, Robert Kitchell, William Leete, William Chittenden, John Bishop and John Caffinge, in behalf of themselves and the others of their party.

The articles given for this tract were twelve coats, twelve fathoms of wampum, twelve glasses, twelve pairs of shoes, twelve hatchets, twelve pairs of stockings, twelve hoes, four kettles, twelve knives, twelve hats, twelve porringers, twelve spoons, and two English coats.

The settlement commenced immediately after this purchase; and before winter set in, they had cleared the necessary land and built houses, and moved into them.

One of the houses built at that time, was the Henry Whitfield house, which was built of stone, and is now standing; it is said to be the oldest house now standing in the United States; some years ago, it was purchased by the State of Connecticut, and it is now used by the state as an Historical Museum building.

After the Whitfield house was completed, it was used by the community, to hold their church services in, until their first church was built, a year or two later, as well as being used by the Rev. Henry Whitfield and his family, as a residence.

Mr. Whitfield was desirous of extending the plantation, and it was through his efforts, that other purchases of land were made from the Indians; a portion being purchased from Uncas, who claimed the land by virtue of the conquest of the Pequoids or Pequots, in which he assisted.

The original settlers were mostly farmers; they had not a merchant among them, and scarcely a mechanic; it was with great trouble and expense that they procured a blacksmith.

Thomas Norton was the first miller; he was appointed miller, by the Company, or settlement in 1646, and he received compensation from the Company, or settlement, in addition to one-half of the toll, which he took from each grist; the other half of the toll, going to the Company or settlement. He served as miller from the time of his appointment until his death in 1648.

The Thomas Norton house was built and stood on what is now State street in the village of Guilford.

The following data, down to Elihu Norton⁵, as to names, dates, and places of births, marriages and deaths, is taken from an Article on "The Descendents of Thomas Norton of Guilford, Conn.", published in the New England Historical and Genealogical Register, volume 54, page 269 (in 1900).

From Elihu Norton⁵ down, and also as to such other information, not included in the above classification, it has been gathered from the town records and town histories of different towns, in which the persons referred to, respectively, resided, and from the family records still extant and accessible; and is in all respects authentic and correct, except where it states that the matter is in doubt.

THOMAS NORTON¹.

Son of William Norton, of Sharpenhow, Bedfordshire, England, and Dennis Cholmley, or Chelmsby, his 2nd wife.

Born about 1582, probably at Sharpenhow, England.

Married Grace Wells, at Shelton Parish, Bedfordshire, England, May 5th, 1631. (see N. E. Hist. & Gen. Reg. Vol. 51.)

V. ABIGAIL, b., 1642, at Guilford, Conn. m., Ananias Tryon, at Saybrook, Conn., Aug. 6th, 1667. (see Saybrook Town Records, where name is spelled "Ananias Trians.")

VI. THOMAS², (History of Wolcott says, was born 1646, at Guilford, Conn. Deacon Lewis M. Norton, of Goshen, Conn., says, born about 1636, in England.)

Remarks:

THOMAS NORTON¹, emigrated from England, (Ockley, Surrey County) to America, with his wife and family, in 1639; as a part of Rev. Henry Whitfield's company of immigrants.

He is stated to have been, just prior to leaving England, church warden, in Rev. Henry Whitfield's parish, at Ockley, Surrey Co., England.

Deacon Lewis M. Norton, of Goshen, Conn., identifies him as Thomas, the youngest child of William Norton of Sharpenhaw, and Dennis Chelmsby, his 2nd wife, and gives the date of his birth as 1582.

He was the first miller of Guilford, Conn., and served as such until his death in 1648.

The History of Wolcott, Conn., states that he came to Guilford, Conn. from Ockley, England, having a wife and three daughters; that he had married Grace Wells, 14 years before.

THOMAS NORTON².

Son of Thomas Norton¹ and Grace (Wells) Norton.

Born either 1636, at or near Ockley, England, or 1646, at Guilford, Conn.

Married Elizabeth Mason, at Saybrook, Conn., May 8th, 1671, daughter of Nicholas Mason, of Saybrook, Conn. The marriage is recorded in the town Records of Saybrook, Conn. (See N. E. Hist. & Gen. Reg. Vol. 4, page 139.) She died at Saybrook, Conn., January 31st, 1699. (Savages Genealogical Dictionary, Vol. 3, page 293, says Thomas Norton² married Elizabeth, daughter of John Mason. On careful research and investigation it appears that said Dictionary is in error in regard to the parentage of said Elizabeth Mason.)

Resided at Guilford, Conn., Saybrook, Conn. and Durham, Conn.

Died latter part of year 1712, at Durham, Conn.

Children:

- I. ELIZABETH, b., Oct. 13th, 1674; died April 2nd, 1676.

- VII. EBENEZER, b., Oct. 26th, 1683.
- VIII. JOHN, b., Oct. 3rd, 1686; died Dec. 1768.

Remarks:

THOMAS NORTON², of Saybrook, Conn., was a farmer in prosperous circumstances. His education was good for the period. He left Guilford, Conn. early, never having been a freeman there. With fourteen others, on Sept. 9th, 1662, he signed a writing on the records, at Saybrook, Conn. agreeing to sustain John Clark, Sen., in opposing the settlement of Killingworth at the Hammonasset River.

He was made a freeman at Saybrook, Conn., Sept. 9th, 1668. (See Saybrook Town Records, in N. E. Hist. & Gen. Reg., Vol. 4, page .)

The connection of the Norton's with Saybrook, commenced early, when Mary Norton, sister of Thomas Norton², married Samuel Rockwell, April 6th, 1660, at Windsor, Conn., she is described as from Saybrook, Conn. (See Windsor Town Records.)

THOMAS NORTON² was willed 500 acres of land near Killingworth, Conn., by Uncas, an Indian chief.

He served during King Phillips war—part of the time on the sloop Swan, (See N. E. Hist. & Gen. Reg., Vol. 37, page 367) and under Major Thomas Savage.

JOSEPH NORTON³.

V. DEBORAH, b., 1719; m., her cousin, John Norton.

Remarks:

JOSEPH NORTON³ went to Durham, Conn., as one of the original proprietors of that town, in or before 1708, (See History of Durham, Conn., pages 21-26-&-27).

The following is a copy of an entry in the Town Records of the town of Durham, Conn., being part of the "Proprietor's Records" found in the History of Durham, page 341 viz:

"Joseph Norton, the son of Joseph and Deborah Norton, was borne, Sept. ye 2nd. day, 1709. pr. James Wadsworth, Town Clerk."

ISAAC CRUTTENDEN, father of Deborah, wife of Joseph Norton³, married Lydia, daughter of Anthony (or John) Thompson of New Haven, Conn., Sept. 20th, 1665. He was a son of Abraham Cruttenden (also spelled Crittenden), who emigrated from Kent, England, to Guilford, Conn., in 1639, with the Rev. Henry Whitfield's company; and who was one of the signers of the Guilford Plantation Covenant; (See Savage's Genealogical Dictionary).

JOSEPH NORTON⁴.

Son of Joseph Norton³ and Deborah (Cruttenden) Norton.

Born Sept. 2nd, 1709, at Durham, Conn. (See Durham Town Records and Proprietors Records, town of Durham, in History of Durham, Conn., page 341.)

Married 1st., Prudence Osborne, Sept. 16th, 1729, at Durham, Conn. (see Durham town Records); she was the daughter of John Osborne and his wife, Prudence Blagge; and was born at Stratford, Conn., May 13th, 1710. (See History of Stratford, Conn., page 1260.) She died May 4th, 1768.

- IV. ESTHER, b., Dec. 18th, 1738; bapt., at Durham, Conn., Dec. 24th, 1738; m., Miles Norton.

Resided at Durham, Conn., until April 1760, when he removed to Goshen, Litchfield County, Conn.

Remarks:

JOSEPH NORTON⁴ Jr., is spoken of once in the Durham Town Records as "Jesse Norton, Jr.", being the entry of the birth of Elihu⁵, his son, but as the same entry speaks of Prudence, his wife, and the record of the baptism of Elihu⁵ speaks of him, as the son of "Joseph Norton, Jr." and Prudence, his wife, there can be no doubt but that the entry of the name of "Jesse" was a mistake.

See History of Durham, Conn., the Town Records of births, marriages, and deaths, the Proprietor's Records, and Records of Rev. Nathaniel Chauncey, of baptisms and marriages etc., therein contained.

ELIHU NORTON⁵.

Son of Joseph⁴ and Prudence (Osborne) Norton.

Died at Strafford, Orange Co., Vermont, in 1805 or 1806.

Children:

- I. NATHAN, b., at Goshen, Conn., Jan. 12th, 1757; he was a soldier in the Revolutionary War.

- VIII. DINAH, b., probably at Strafford, Vermont, about 1778; she married 1st, Mr. Frary; 2nd, Jacob Stevens.

Remarks:

The dates of the births of Elihu Norton's children are taken from an abstract of the Goshen Town Records, on file in the Town Clerk's Office of the town of Goshen, Conn., made June 6th, 1901, by the Town Clerk (Dr. J. Howard North).

The date of his removal, with his family, to Strafford, Vermont, was furnished by the Town Clerk of Strafford, Vermont, from the records on file in his office.

Of his seven sons, the four oldest served with the Vermont troops during the Revolutionary War. (See Revolutionary War Records on file in the Office of the Adjutant General of the State of Vermont, at Montpelier, Vermont.)

The following is a copy of the church record of the Church of Christ, Durham, Conn., kept by Rev. Elizur Goodrich, Pastor thereof, viz:

"Elihu Norton and Dinah, his wife, removed Dec. 19th, 1756."
(See History of Durham (Fowler's) page 299.)

by 2nd wife:

- VI. ELIZABETH, b., about 1797, at Strafford, Vt.

Remarks:

The dates of the births of the children of Zerah Norton⁶ and of his second marriage, are taken from an abstract of the Strafford Town Records (except as to birth of daughter Elizabeth, which does not appear on said records) which was made July 31st, 1901, by Nathan B. Cobb, Town Clerk of said town.

The first United States census, viz: 1790, gives Zerah Norton as a resident of Strafford, Orange County, Vermont, and enumerates two females and one male, in his family.

He served several different times, with the Vermont troops in the Revolutionary War; serving first in Capt. John Powell's Co. of Vermont Militia in 1780; and he was in service, at the time of the inspection in Nov., 1780, made by Brig. Gen. Olcott.

He also served during the Royalton and Barnard alarms.

He also served from the opening of the campaign of 1781, until June 30th of that year, in Capt. Abner Seelye's Co. of Vermont Militia. He also served in Capt. Abner Seelye's Co. in Col. Benj. Wait's Batallion (Service of Vermont) from July 1st to Nov. 31st, inclusive, 1781.

The above data as to his service, being taken from an abstract of the Vermont State Records on file in the Adj. General's Office at Montpelier, Vt.

He was taken prisoner by the enemy, while scouting, Oct. 19th, 1781; was carried to St. Johns, then to Chambly and then to Prisoners' Island, where he remained in captivity fourteen months, when he was liberated by the British, and returned home, arriving there Nov. 17th, 1782.

The following is a copy of the bill rendered to the State of Vermont by him, and the action of the state authorities thereon, as it appears in "Rolls of the Soldiers in the Revolutionary War", compiled by John E. Goodrich, published by the authority of the Vermont Legislature, in 1904, by Tuttle Co., Rutland, Vt. (Volume is in New York Public Library), at page 760, viz:

"480. Zerah Norton, prisoner.

He was a Revolutionary War Pensioner, his pension being allowed Oct. 16th, 1832, when he resided in Bethany, Genesee Co., N. Y.

The records of the Pension Department, at Washington, D. C., besides reciting the date and place of his birth, his second marriage, his place of residence at the time of granting his pension, the date and place of his death, and his military service, as hereinbefore stated in this record, gives the following statement as to his capture and captivity, viz: "was taken prisoner while scouting, carried to St. Johns and Chambly, then to Prisoner's Island, where he remained 14 months, and was then liberated and arrived home Nov. 7th, 1783."

Remarks:

The above data as to births, marriages, and deaths is taken from family records, still extant.

In 1810, Ambrose Norton⁷ located in Bethany, Genesee County, N. Y., and took up some land from the Holland Company, which he held on contract until 1819, when he finished paying for it, and received a deed thereof from said company.

He first erected a house or log cabin on said land; but between 1820 and 1830, he erected a brick house thereon, of the prevailing New England style, himself manufacturing the brick that was used in building the house, with material on said farm. The house is still standing, apparently in good repair (1916).

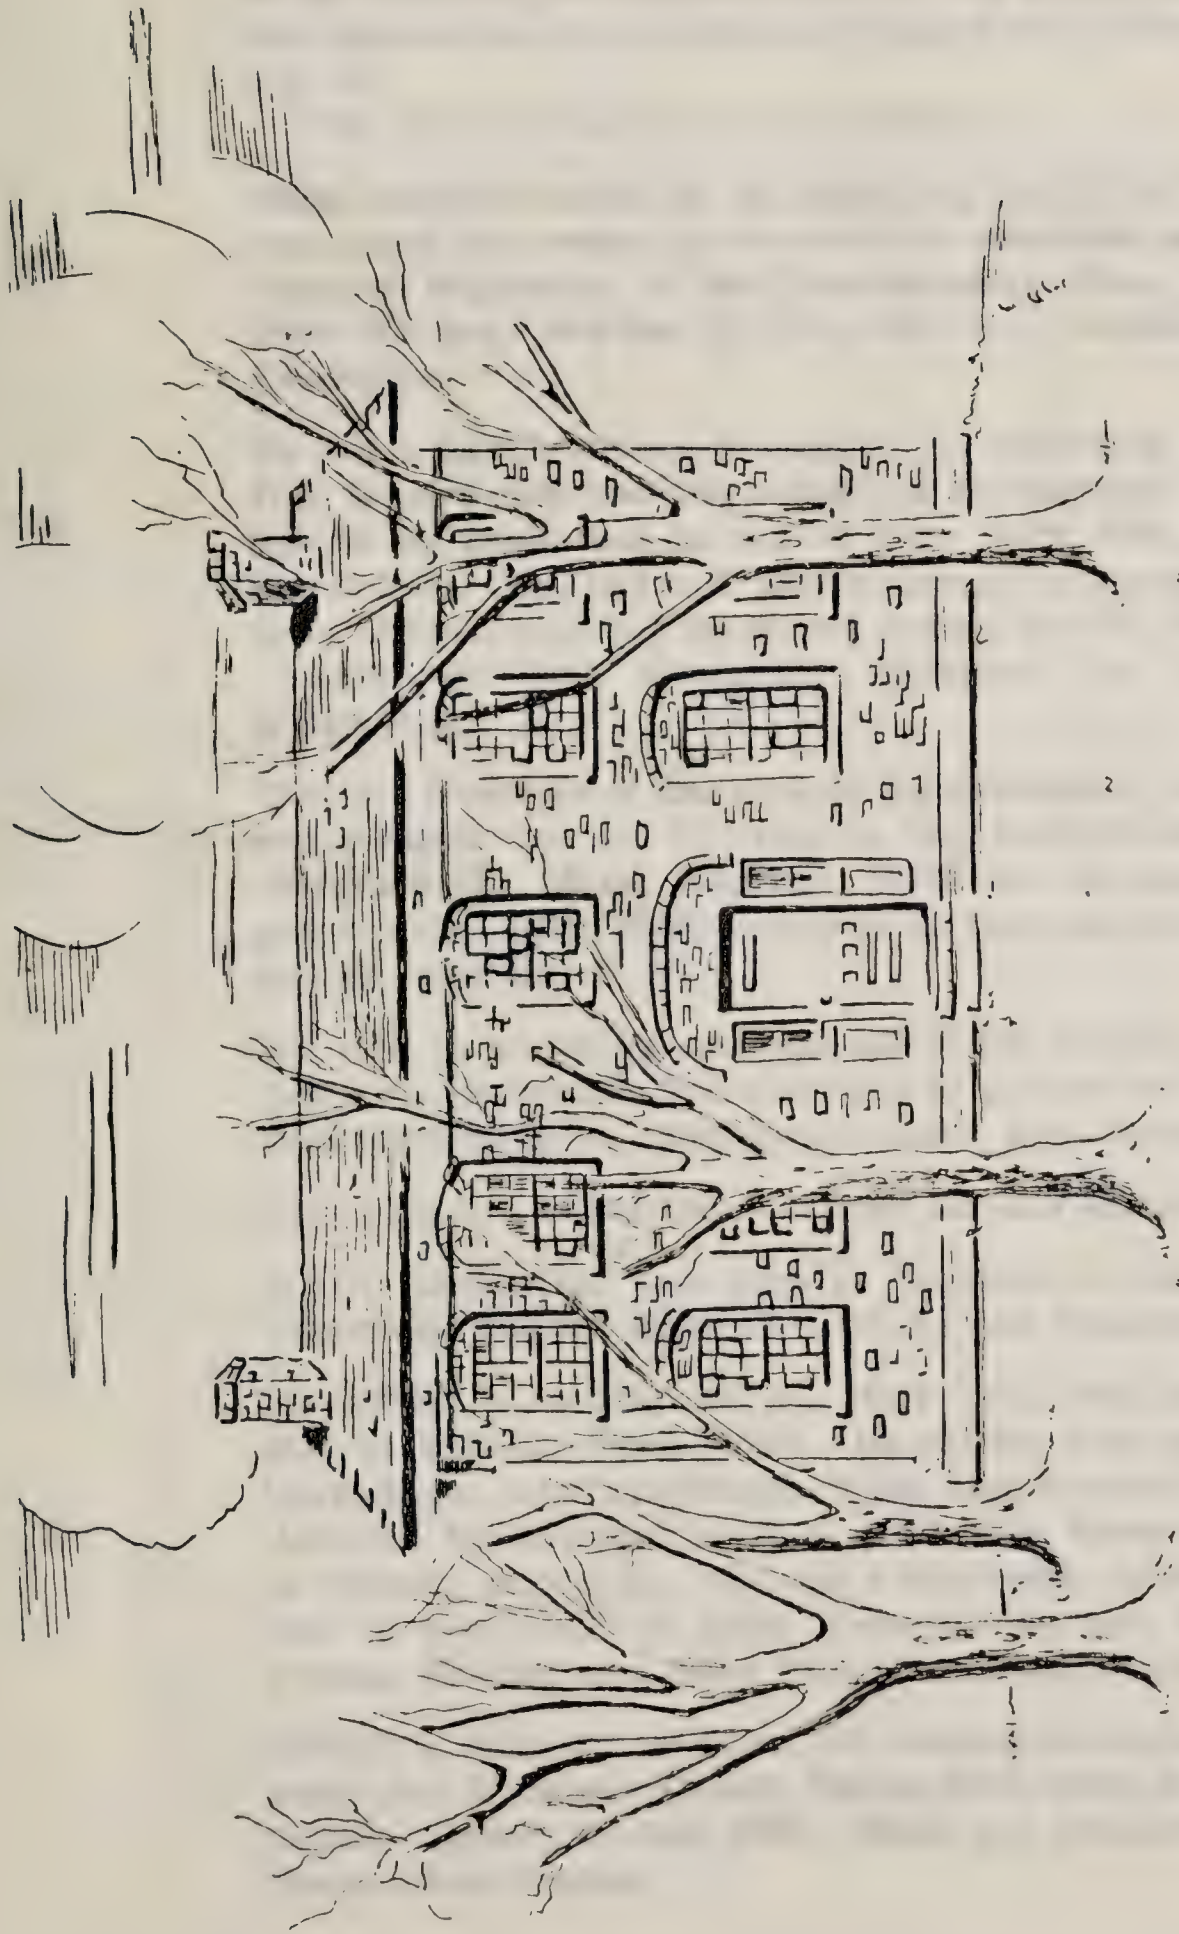

He served a short time in the war of 1812; being a private in Capt. Richard Peck's Company (Churchill's) 164 Regt. N. Y. Militia, serving part of May, June and part of July, 1812—also in December, 1813;—and again Sept. and Oct., 1814.

In 1856 a land warrant for bounty land, so-called, was granted by the United States government, for such service; and Ambrose Lathrop Norton⁹ took up 160 acres of land thereunder, in the town of Geneva, Freeborn County, Minn., in 1859.

For records of his military service, see Records of U. S. Pension Bureau, at Washington, D. C.

SYLVIA KENDALL, wife of Ambrose Norton⁷, and mother of all his children, was a daughter of Peter Kendall and Mary Hart Kendall, his wife, of Stafford, or South Stafford, Orange County, Vermont; she was born at Vermont, Oct. 28th, 1789.

The Military Service of Ralph T. Norton.

Ralph T. Norton, in August, 1917, applied to the United States Aviation Recruiting Office for enlistment in the United States Air Force; he was rejected by the recruiting officers as being too young.

October 1, 1917, he enlisted at the New York City Canadian Recruiting Office, in the Royal Air Force. November 18, 1917, pursuant to orders, he went to Toronto, Ontario, for training; December 29, 1917, he was transferred to school No. 4 of Military Aeronautics, and was there eight weeks; and then was sent to Armor Heights Camp, Toronto, for flying instruction; was then transferred to Camp Rathburn near Desoronto, Canada, for solo flying; and from there to Leaside, near Toronto, for instruction in aerial gunnery; then back to Toronto, where he was commissioned 2nd Lieutenant, Flying Officer, Royal Air Forces, on July 11, 1918.

He was at once ordered overseas; and left New York, N. Y., with draft of officers on R. M. S. Grampian; arrived in Liverpool, England, August 4, 1918, and was at once assigned to the Seaplane Squadron stationed at Felixstowe, Suffolk County, England, and placed on active hostile aircraft and hostile submarine duty along the coast of northern France, Belgium, Holland and Germany to Heligoland and over the North Sea. He was there on active duty until December 8, 1918.

While on that duty prior to the Armistice he took part in numerous engagements with enemy airplanes and enemy submarines; was in the engagement when the last German Zeppelin was shot down and destroyed, which occurred over the North Sea off the coast of Belgium. And in an air battle in September, 1918, his airplane was forced to land in the North Sea, owing to the petrol tank being shot full of holes by the attacking Hun airmen; one of the gunners being shot in the shoulder and seriously wounded; they sent out two carrier pigeons with messages for help, and after being afloat nine hours on the open sea in their airplane they were picked up by a destroyer sent out, in answer to their messages, to find and rescue them. Their daily course was from Felixstowe across the English Channel to the coast of northern France a little below Ostend, then up to Heligoland, passing over Zeebrugge and then circling over the North Sea, back to Felixstowe.

They acted as aerial convoy, at times, to fleets of ships, both naval and merchant ships; and did scouting; and were used to repel enemy airplane and zeppelin raids.

He took active part in attacks on and bombardment of Ostend and Zeebrugge in October, 1918, when those places were captured by the Allies.

On December 8, 1918, he was transferred to Orkney Islands, with headquarters at Houton Bay on the Scapa Flow, where the German Navy then was stationed, after its surrender; where he was on duty, locating drifting and anchored mines in the mine fields between the Orkney Islands and the Norwegian coast; he remained there until January 18, 1919, when he was ordered to London to await repatriation.

October 17, 1918, he was promoted and received his commission as 1st Lieutenant. 2033165

March 31, 1919, he was ordered home, left Liverpool, England, April 1, 1919, on the White Star Ship Megantic, and landed in Halifax, Nova Scotia, April 9, 1919; went from

Lo-Lathrop

Rev. John Lathrop, or Lothrop, the first American ancestor of the following branch of the Lathrop family, was a descendant of the Lowthropes of Lowthrope, East Riding, Yorkshire, England. See Huntington's "Lo-Lathrop Family."

A short list of his ancestors, taken therefrom, is as follows:

1. John Lothrop, of Cherry Burton, England, was a man of substance, being assessed twice as much as any other inhabitant of his parish, in 1545. He was a son of _____ Lathrop; he had a son Robert².
2. Robert Lathrop, son of John Lathrop¹, b. in Cherry Burton, England; died in Cherry Burton, England, 1558; m., Ellen _____, who survived him 14 years; had a son Thomas³.
3. Thomas Lathrop, son of Robert Lathrop², b. in Cherry Burton, England; died at Etten, England; m., 1st, Elizabeth Clark; she died at Etten, England, July, 1574; 2nd, Mary _____, she died Jan., 1588; 3rd, Jane _____, and by these three wives he had 28 children, the Rev. John Lathrop being one of them.

The following data, and information is compiled from the History of Norwich, Conn., page 217; and articles on certain of John Lathrop's descendants, published in "American Ancestry," Vol. 1, page 47; Vol. 8, page 150; "Old Houses of the Ancient Town of Norwich" which gives Samuel Lathrop's² descendants, to Zachariah Lathrop⁵ inclusive; and from the "Lathrop Family Tree" in the possession of Mrs. Clark, of Springfield, Mass. (in 1901), and from Genealogical Notes of Barnstable Families, Vol. 2, pages 162-215.

This church was the first Independent, or Congregational church organized in England. The congregation was broken up by ecclesiastical rigor in 1632; and the Pastor, Rev. John Lathrop¹, was summoned to appear before "The Star Chamber"; he was tried before that tribunal and found guilty of "Non-conformity" to the prevailing religion; and sentenced to imprisonment in Newgate Prison, where he was imprisoned for the next two years.

In 1634, he was released from said prison on condition that he leave England; which amounted to the same thing as a sentence to "Banishment."

He at once emigrated with his family to America, sailing from London, in the ship Griffin. He landed at Boston, Mass., 1634, and settled at Scituate, Mass., where he arrived Sept. 16th, 1634. Roxa Minerva Lathrop⁷, as appears above, married Lorenzo D. Norton⁸, and therefore the Lathrop ancestors end with her.

As of the families included in these pedigrees, the Tolles and Doty families first settled in what is now Bennington, New York, and were identified with East Bennington and adjoining Attica from the first settlement of the locality; and the Norton and Wright families were also so identified from the 1860's. The descendants, present and future generations, of those families should be interested in the incidents of the settlement of that section for the first half century thereof, and the personal experiences and memories relating to it, as written by James Sibley Tolles, the ancestor of many of them, about 1865. He was the oldest son of John Tolles, one of the first three settlers of the vicinity. As a child of two and one-half years he was in February, 1803, brought from Vermont, with the family, to the cabin his father erected the preceding summer, within a few rods of the present sites of the East Bennington Church and cemetery; and he resided within less than one-half mile of that cabin site until his death over 83 years later. So the record of the Tolles family is prefaced by a short "History of the Locality where John Tolles Settled in 1802" by James Sibley Tolles.

History of the Locality where John Tolles Settled in 1802.

BY JAMES SIBLEY TOLLES.

1802. At the beginning of the nineteenth century when the first settlement of the "Genesee Country" commenced, when the fertility of the soil and the beautiful aspect of the country were attracting the attention of those seeking new homes, John Tolles left the town of Orwell in the state of Vermont, with no other outfit than a system inured to labor, an indomitable will, a few necessary articles of apparel, and the means of locomotion furnished by nature. He fell in company with Jacob Wright from one of the eastern states, at the Great Bend of the Tonnewanda (Batavia), who was also a "land-looker," and pursuing thence their journey together, they, in the summer of 1802, at the northeast corner of the town of Bennington (then Batavia) located on lots 4, 6, 8, and 10 in the third section, in the tenth town and third Range of the Holland Company's Purchase, and were thus the first settlers of the present town of Bennington.

Their first work was to build each a log cabin about half a mile distant from each other, covered with bark, a good protection from rain or wind, and with a fire burning outside the cabin they were able to sleep soundly, notwithstanding the howl of the wolf or the occasional scream of the panther.

The country at that time was an unbroken forest; no foot but that of the Redman had ever trod its soil, with the exception of the surveyor who was then in the woods. The only road was one opened by the Holland Company from Batavia to the present site of Alexander village, and thence southwest to the northeast corner of the town.

After building each a log cabin of sufficient size for his family, and after clearing the land, sowing three or four acres of wheat, they returned for their families.

They arrived again in February, 1803, with their families. They found another settler had located his family on a part of the same quartersection and had a good fire in his new built cabin to welcome his neighbors to their forest home.

Three families came into the present town of Attica early in the year 1803. In the fall of 1802, Zerah Phelps, who had located at Batavia the previous year, having purchased the mill irons and the materials for building mills, moved to Attica and early in 1803 commenced building the mills, locating the saw mill on the west side, and the grist mill on the east side of the creek.

A road was immediately cut out and worked, to the extent of making it travelable, from Attica southwest to the present location of Hubbard's Corners, and making at its eastern end a junction with the road cut out by the Holland Company, from Batavia through Alexander to Attica.

On the 25th of July of this year, Miss Harriet Phelps was born at Attica, being the first child born in all this part of the Purchase.

In the summer of 1804, several more families of young men came into town. The settlers began to clear away the forest and supply themselves with teams, cows, sheep, and swine which were allowed to get their living in the woods; but the bears, wolves, and some other animals of the forest were very destructive if the domestic animals were not yarded at night near the house; and for ten years, notwithstanding the fields were fenced and domestic animals were kept more in pastures, it was necessary to yard the sheep to protect them from wolves.

It was made the special business of every lad of sufficient age, to see that the sheep were yarded. A lad of some eight summers, going for the sheep one night, while the sun was one or two hours high, was greatly pleased to hear the sheep bell tinkle and soon to see the sheep coming toward the yard with great speed; but as the sheep passed him what was his surprise to find them pursued by a pack of wolves, the foremost one of which came within a few rods of him. However he halloed with so much spirit as to deter the wolves from further pursuit; and after shutting the sheep safely in the yard, the lad was soon beside his mother, relating his recent adventures with the wolves. And notwithstanding nearly sixty years have intervened, he will remember the large wolf that led the van, which, after running some ten or twenty rods, turned with a malicious aspect to view the insignificant object that had thwarted him in his design on the sheep.

Many horned cattle were brought into this country and, during the warm season were allowed to roam at will in the extensive forest, where they soon became good beef without expense to their proprietors; but the attempt to keep them without care, in the forest, in the winter proved a failure. But the cattle of the settlers were kept during the first two or three winters on "browse," without difficulty. At the beginning of the winter of 1803 or 1804, the snow having become deep, the cattle strayed away in search of feed. A company of men started in pursuit, and after much search, found the cattle near night, in the valley of the Tonewanda, a short distance north of the present village of Varysburgh, about six miles from home; but it was too near night to get them home that day or perhaps in two days. What was to be done? There was no escape; they must stay with the cattle. The flint and steel were accordingly produced; but the flint, being well worn, and the hands that held them being numb, the spark would not catch; and there was prospect of remaining in the snow, without fire overnight. The flint was passed to Nathan Tolles, a bachelor of the company, who after making a few abortive attempts in which he brought the flint and steel within six inches of contact, he handed the flint back with the remark "we must freeze," and beginning to shiver he prepared to meet his doom; but soon in hands somewhat warmed by exercise, and directed by a mind that had no intention of freezing, the steel gave evidence of success, the spark began to smoke. Nathan concluding not to freeze until he had helped make a fire for the rest, dexterously plied the axe, and was soon seen wiping the perspiration from his brow, and did not need the genial warmth of the fire which was now burning near by. After gathering some hemlock brush for a bed, the company slept soundly until morning; and in the course of the day arrived at their homes with the stock.

It may be presumed that the howlings from the forests were at first alarming to women and children; yet after becoming acquainted with them, it was amusing rather than otherwise, while sitting around a blazing wood fire of an evening in the log cabins, to hear the howl of a pack of wolves in as many voices as there were individuals among them; and they would be answered by a pack in another direction, and another and perhaps another, until the very forests, extensive as they were, seemed alive with them.

Bears were also plenty and were very annoying to the settlers. Every unlucky pig that undertook to sleep under an old log, was pretty sure to be made a feast for Mrs. Bruin and her offspring. The bears committed most of their depredations in the night and were not often seen in the daytime; they were seldom or never known to molest any of the genus homo. After the country was cultivated, the bears became very destructive in the wheat fields and corn fields. Two young men who had cleared a field and sowed it to wheat the year previous, had returned, built them a log barn, and harvested their wheat, leaving it in the field a few days to dry. They lodged in the barn; then a thunder storm coming on, in the night, they could see the bears thro the interstices of the barn at every flash of lightning pulling down their wheat stacks, and helping themselves, without so much as "with your leave, gentlemen."

Indians, the original lords of the soil, in their sale to Robert Morris, had reserved various and extensive tracts, on which they resided. One of these, the Buffalo Reservation, formed the western boundary of the town of Bennington. The celebrated Red Jacket, with several others of minor note, was chief; and Horatio Jones was Interpreter. In passing to or from other tribes or families on the Genesee River, and eastward to the Mohawk, and southward to Pennsylvania, by the continual tramp of ages, they had indented the soil in some places to a depth of a foot or more, following a slightly serpentine, though generally straight, course. Although the track was not more than fifteen or eighteen inches wide, it formed what is familiarly known as the "Redman's Broad Highway." This path entered the town near the northwest corner of the town and, pursuing a course nearly due east, through the northern tier of lots and quartersections, left the town half a mile south of the northeast corner, crossing the Tonewanda creek in Attica a short distance below the present village of Attica, on some driftwood; and after leaving Attica, it passed a short distance north of the "Wright Taverner Stand" in Middlebury.

Numerous relics have been found in the vicinity of the path. In Middlebury a carpenter's drawshave was found, entirely buried from sight in the trunk of a tree. It had apparently been placed in the crotch of a small tree, in some of their wandering excursions after the first settlement of the country. One settler, in an effort to split a fine ash into rails, found, after splitting three quarters of its length, that all the efforts of his mall and wedges would not open it farther. He fell to cutting, in an effort to find what was the matter, and found, entirely encircling the tree and covered over with wood, a small log chain. In felling trees, arrow heads have sometimes been found in the timber.

The Indians, during the hunting season, frequently built temporary lodges in the vicinity of the settlers, and remained, one or two families together, hunting and smoking their meats.

It had become an axiom with settlers that untrustworthiness and treachery were synonyms with Indian; but Hispaniola, an Indian winter visitor, repelled the slander indignantly, and insisted that the Indian acted in perfect good faith in every way; and all his intercourse warranted this conclusion. Such also was the character of all the tribes in this vicinity.

In October of the year 1804, a son, Roswell Tolles, was born to the family of John Tolles, being the first child born in Bennington, and the second south of Batavia, on the purchase.

In December, 1805, Amos Tolles died—this being the first death of an adult in all this part of the purchase.

“Land-lookers,” as they were termed, began to be quite plenty, and many claims or “settlements” were made during the winter and spring. Log cabins were located in sight, and the looing of the ox and the bleat-ing of the sheep, began to be heard in place of the snarling of the bear and the howling of the wolf.

Settlements had commenced in Sheldon, and were progressing rapidly, Phelps and Chipman having purchased a large tract in town. Roswell Turner broke the forest, locating his cabin on the Bigtree road, at the place now called North Sheldon. Settlements were also progressing in Attica.

What gave the greatest impetus to settlements in these towns was the building of a sawmill and a gristmill at Attica (village), the former in the fall of 1803, and the latter in 1804, being the first gristmill erected on the purchase. Gristing was previously done at LeRoy or Caledonia. The first framed barn was erected by Jacob Wright this year. The carpenter, Mr. Bradway, worked the "turnble and scribe rule" and nearly every man west of the Genesee River was employed to raise it.

In June, 1804, Bennington was visited by a tornado, such as has not since been known. The principal track of the tornado was nearly due east; entering the town near the northwest corner, pursuing its course on the north tier of lots, it left the town near the northeast corner. It prostrated nearly all the trees in its track, a half mile wide, and laid the trees as smooth and even as the mowing machine lays the timothy in the meadow. On the borders of its track the timber fell in every direction, and one might readily imagine that Longfellow had seen it in its early stage when he wrote:

"Till they found all further passage
Shut against them, barred securely
By the trunks of trees uprooted,

Lying lengthwise, lying crosswise,
And forbidding further passage."

For a part of its course it pursued the Redman's Broad Highway, heretofore mentioned, and filled it completely. This left the Redmen no alternative but to go farther north, leaving the path their ancestors had trod for ages, but resuming it as soon as the obstruction was passed.

A tannery, commenced the previous year, was this year put in full operation; a shoe shop was erected which supplied boots and shoes to all the south part of the purchase for several years; a smith shop was also erected and with the mills, before mentioned, the settlers became quite independent.

In the beginning of 1806, there were over twenty families located in Bennington, and the settlement began to have the appearance of an old place.

Early in May of this year, 1806, a child was lost in the woods and was never found. His father, Hiram Tolles, had cleared a piece of ground and sowed it to wheat, the year previous and, as was customary, at that early stage, had omitted a fence until spring. A neighbor's cows coming into the wheat while the family were at breakfast, Hiram, a lad of six years old, was directed to drive them out across the brook, which did not exceed ten rods from the house. He did not immediately return, and the family, going about their usual vocations, forgot the circumstances until afternoon. Search was then made at the neighbors without success. Not until the next day was much anxiety felt, when the alarm was spread far and wide, and the whole country for forty or fifty miles around, with true backwoods fraternity, commenced the search. Mr. Ellicott, the land agent, sent provisions on pack horses to supply those in search. The Indians also joined in the search, stimulated by a generous offer of reward, made by Mr. Ellicott and others.

The country was an unbroken wilderness to the west (the direction the lad went) to Buffalo. Discovery of bush huts, and tracks of a lad, when he crossed wet places were several times made, but although the search by the main body was continued twenty days, the effort was abandoned without success; the child was never found.

Hope had buoyed up the spirits of the parents and their friends while the search continued, but their feelings can better be imagined than described when it was given up. Reports would frequently be circulated that a child answering the description, had been seen in such a place, or among some tribe of Indians, and the father would send a special messenger one or two hundred miles, only to meet a renewed disappointment; no reliable tidings could be found. Frequently I have met with inquiry in western New York, "Are you a brother of the lost boy?" The circumstances remained for years in the memory of the settlers.

Bees, huskings, sleighrides, sometimes with a pair of oxen, quiltings, pareings (not apples—we had none but pumpkins), balls, etc., were the order of the day among the young people and some not very young. There was in those days no caste, no high, no low;

the first of these was the fact that the United States had no standing army at the time of the Revolution. This was a serious disadvantage, for the British had a large and well-trained army. The Continental Congress, however, was determined to create a new army, and in 1775 it passed the Militia Act, which gave the federal government the right to call up the militia in case of emergency. This was a significant step towards the creation of a national army.

The second of the three main reasons for the success of the American Revolution was the fact that the British were fighting a long and costly war in two theaters. They were fighting the American Revolution in North America, and they were also fighting the Seven Years' War in Europe. This was a major strategic mistake, for it stretched their resources thin. The Continental Congress, on the other hand, was fighting a single war in North America, and they were able to concentrate their resources on this one front.

The third of the three main reasons for the success of the American Revolution was the fact that the British were fighting a war of attrition. They were trying to wear down the Continental Army by fighting a series of battles. The Continental Army, however, was fighting a war of maneuver. They were trying to outmaneuver the British by fighting a series of battles. This was a major tactical mistake, for it allowed the Continental Army to win the war by outmaneuvering the British.

all were not too many, less than all were quite too few.

During 1805, the Rev. Peter P. Root and Rev. Mr. Butler, Baptist, commenced preaching in town (Bennington). Quite an extensive Revival prevailed; nearly all the adults in the settlements were participants. The Baptist Church, now constituting the First Baptist Church of Attica was formed comprising nearly all the inhabitants of both settlements. The Church this year, 1806, was moved to Attica, under the pastoral care of the Rev. Mr. Osburn, who was the first pastor on the Holland Purchase.

A singing school was also established this year under the care and instruction of Mr. John Van Bogart, a young man of German descent, from the east, comprising all the "voice" of both settlements, Bennington and Attica.

Attica (village) at this time consisted of the grist-mill and the sawmill, and Phelps's double log house and a large hollow buttonwood tree which grew on the bank of the Tonawanda. The tree was felled, some apertures cut through for windows, seats were made, and within its trunk Mr. Bogart occasionally assembled his singing school. A section of the big "buttonwood" was later converted into a boat and was placed on the mill pond where it served the purposes of utility and recreation for several years, until, during a flood, it broke loose from its moorings, went over the dam, was split from stem to stern, and was left to decay among the things that were.

Settlement on the purchase generally, and in Bennington particularly was retarded by the want of roads. The Holland Company had opened one road from Batavia to the northeast corner of the town, thence southwest and south, through the town. That is, it had cut down and cleared out the timber about one rod wide, and bridged the small streams with logs, and corduroyed some of the bad swamps. The remembrance of driving a wagon over a log causeway for a mile in length, produces a nervous headache after a lapse of fifty years. Where the roads were not corduroyed they were immediately, on being traveled, cut up by the tramp of the cattle's feet; so that I well remember riding on horseback two miles to mill, without once finding dry ground in the distance. A traveler, arriving on the summit of a ravine, inquired of some men, who were at work in the ravine if the bottom were good. He was answered by a wag, that it was. After plunging and wallowing for some time in the mud, he reproached his informer for having deceived him. "You told me the bottom was good," said the traveler; "and so it is," was the ready reply, "but you have not got half way to it yet." However, this extreme traveling did not exist throughout the year; much of the time it was better.

The town of Batavia at this time comprised nearly all the territory south and west on the purchase, except Willink, which had been set off two years previously. All political business was transacted at the Great Bend, as Batavia was then called, to distinguish the locality from other parts of the territory.

1807. The season of 1807 brought in its train several auspicious events. A school house was built and a school was organized, taught by Miss Rachel Truesdale, who, during the progress of her school, was married to Mr. Aaron Whitney; thus she became not only the first school teacher of all this part of the purchase, but the first bride also.

Two Methodist Brothers, Mr. Van Nest and Mr. commenced preaching in our school house soon after its construction, and organized a church which is still extant. The Rev. Gentlemen, Mitchel and Gitchell afterward alternated on this circuit.

In the summer of 1807, while the school was in session, and just at the close of the day, Chauncey Loomis moved past the school house into town. He was then a young man of talent and wealth, a bachelor, accompanied by his brother, Justin, his mother, several hired men, and some others, with a train of wagons from Connecticut. His mother, a widowed lady of great spirit and energy, drove her chaise, a two wheeled vehicle, the whole distance, and would allow none of the men in any emergency to aid her by guiding the animal through the mud holes, or over the cradle knolls. Mr. Loomis opened the road through the native forest for the last three or four miles. He purchased a large tract of land in town paying one dollar per acre, and sold it again to his former townsmen who soon gathered around him, each building a log cabin and opening a small place in the woods. This gave the new settlement at the centre of the town where it was located, the appearance of an older place. It gave new impetus to the settlement not only in the immediate vicinity, but also to the one in the east part of the town where improvements had previously been confined. Mr. Loomis brought with him tools and implements necessary for tilling the soil and harvesting the crops, also a stock of domestic goods for sale to his neighbors. He thus became the first merchant southwest of Batavia.

This year orchards were set out from a nursery of young trees planted by John Tolles four years previous; trees were also brought from Cholestown (now Lima) in Ontario (Livingston) County.

David, Elisha, and Henry Hoard built a sawmill in the south part of the town near Sheldon town line during this year, being the first sawmill erected in town, during the progress of the work, David Hoard was killed by a limb falling from a tree.

The proprietor of the mill at Attica had the misfortune to break his mill saw, and as a new one could not be had short of Utica, he borrowed one of the gentlemen Hoard, until one could be brought. A journey with a team to Utica and back was not made in a day or a week.

Among the settlers who came in to the Loomis settlement, as it was then called, were Eza Ludden, Peltiah Case, George Hoskins, George Loomis, Aaron Clapp and Joseph Farnham, whose descendants and connections form a large part of the inhabitants at the present day.

The Military authorities of the state organized companies and a regiment on the purchase. One company was located in this town and some adjoining towns. Burbank of Attica was appointed Captain and John Jones of Bennington, Lieutenant; Jacob Wright also of Bennington was appointed Ensign; and our town was honored by the location of two of the first military officers on the purchase, within her bounds. Early in 1808 Captain Burbank was promoted and Lieutenant Jones was appointed Captain. In the fall of this year the first Regimental training was given at Alexander, and was reviewed by Brigadier General Alexander Rhea. The Regiment was formed on the ground east of the bridge, at Alexander village, on the north side of the road. We all went to training, men, women and children; some walked on foot, some rode on horseback, and some rode in ox wagons. Lads had their new fine shirts, just made of Hum Hums, imported by Mr. Merchant Loomis, and although it was about as fine and white as that now used to convey grain to market the price was six shillings pr. yard; and these were the first fine shirts worn in town.

The roads being bad and circuitous, very few arrived home until after dark—not in time to fold the sheep; and it was found the next morning that the wolves had made sad havoc with the lambs, taking from three or four, to ten or twelve from a flock.

The left-handed and a colored fiddler were there and many of the boys and girls, some of thirteen and some of sixty, were stepping to the music.

Another mill was erected this year, by Mr. Loomis at his settlement. It was of much benefit to the settlers in covering and flooring their cabins.

DESCRIPTION OF A LOG CABIN.

Built of assized logs, and of one length as near as may be, notched, saddled together at the corners, chinked with split basswood inside, and plastered with clay or loam outside, the roof cobbled up with poles and covered with elm or ash bark, peeled in its season, and tied to the poles with strips of bark from the white elm. The floor covering consisted of some slabs of basswood split with the maul and wedge. After being adjusted in their places, face side up, they were made somewhat even with the carpenter's adz. After shrinkage, there were interstices between, sufficient nearly to admit the foot. Apertures were cut for a door and one or two windows, which were supplied with a door, made of slabs, split from the basswood and hewed to a boardlike appearance with a narrow axe; some ribs pinned across them served to hold them together, and extending on one side, served also for hinges on which the door turned. The door was provided with a wooden latch and a leather string, if one could be had, if not resort was again had to the elm. The string hung outside to raise the latch and give admittance from that side; to fasten and bar the door against intruders at night, the string was pulled in. The window was supplied with slate and some oiled or greased paper instead of glass. A stone chimney was provided with a stone or earthen hearth. In that early stage of settlement, when the forest protected from the winds, and the earth did not freeze in winter, a comfortable dwelling was made without a nail, a particle of iron, or a board or a pane of glass, and with no other tools than an axe and a gimlet, and no mechanic but the settler himself.

For this improvement and clearing two or three acres of land, the land agent deducted two years' interest on his land.

March 19th, 1808, Sheldon was formed into a town, comprising all the territory south of Alexander, west of Warsaw, east of the Indian Reservation, and north of Cattaraugus County, seven townships.

Improvements continued; settlers came in freely. Loomis had opened a road at his expense, directly across the Indian Reservation to Buffalo, but the difficulty of making roads in the wooded forest rendered very difficult the passage through the country. There was yet no market for the extra produce of the settlers, and none was required, as the new arrivals took up the surplus; consequently roads for market purposes were not necessary, but the want of roads was severely felt on other accounts.

Mr. Loomis, who had been appointed one of the Judges of the Genesee Common Pleas, married Miss Rachel Evans, a sister of the Hon. David E. Evans of Batavia. He moved his estimable bride home eighteen miles on horseback.

Bears and wolves, apparently invited in by the sheep and swine of the settlers, were more troublesome than at first. They would frequently come into the farm yards in the day time and carry off a lamb or a pig.

A bear has been known to refuse to give up his pig though pursued by the farmer and his boys, yes and mother and daughters too, with clubs. Parties were occasionally made up to watch the corn and wheat fields by night. A few dogs had been obtained of sufficient courage to drive them to a "tree." A party of six or eight was made up early in the fall to watch a corn field. They had obtained two bear dogs. Among the men was a well built lad of twenty, one of German descent, familiarly called "Jake." Very soon after approaching the field they discovered by the bark of the dogs the game had treed; and following as well as they could in the dark they were soon all assembled in a dense grove of hemlock near the field, after much ground, if not lofty, tumbling. Mr. Bruin's tree being pointed out by the well known action and bark of the dogs, while some of the party were engaged in striking up a fire, intending to lie by until day light might reveal his or her bearship, a mark for their guns, Jake exclaimed, "Dunder, and I'll shoot arter him," and suiting the action to the word elevated his old King's arm, charged with something short of a quarter of a pound of powder and half a dozen rifle balls, for buck shot, pulled at a venture when, to the astonishment of the whole party, down came a three year old bear of the male kind, so near the lad as to brush his pantaloons in his descent. And whether from envy at his good luck in the feat he performed in the dark, which is not often done by a good marksman in light, some one asserted Jake was scared. However that might be, as the fire blazed up at the time, and perhaps shone to a disadvantage on his face, Jake was discovered to be the whitest man in the company. After a good hearty laugh, perhaps at Jake's expense, they swung Mr. Bruin on a pole, and four men at a time bore him in triumph. And thus with the aid of bear traps, deadfalls, the Indians, the dogs, and their guns, in the course of four or five years the bears were so much thinned out that they were much less troublesome.

The trouble occasioned by the Berlin and Milan decrees, the British Orders in Council, etc., had begun to be felt in Western New York and to materially check settlement in town. The embargo laid in 1807 had had the effect, rather than otherwise, to advance our settlement. A large business sprung up of running property into Canada. Mr. Loomis's road across the Indian Reservation afforded a ready winter road to Lake Erie, by an out of the way route, and thence across the Lake on the ice; and many a load of Pork, wheat, corn and whiskey had passed through town on its way to the Crown Dominion, and almost every house was, during the winter while the Embargo continued, converted into a public house for the accommodation of man and beast. But our general government began, as was believed, to favor our former ally and, thereby, giving umbrage to England, the murmurings of war, that had for some time been faintly heard in the distance, began to give more distinct sounds, which deterred settlers locating in town; and some settlers who had commenced improvements left them, went east and never returned. But, notwithstanding, some new lots were located and the forests continually were giving way before the indomitable axman.

The prospects of war with England became more imminent and before the close of the year preparations for war had been commenced by our government. Our town lying contiguous to the British province with only the Indian Reservation between, it was a well known fact that Red Jackett had given his consent to bury the hatchet with the pale faces with great reluctance. It was feared the Indians might be induced to again take sides with their former allies and the scenes of the Mohawk and Valley of Wyoming began in imagination to loom up in the minds of the settlers.

The territory now comprising the towns of Attica, Orangeville, and Wethersfield, was set off from Sheldon and erected into a new town by the name of Attica, leaving still four townships in Sheldon.

A Presbyterian Church was formed by Rev. Mr. Spencer in 1809, and the Baptist Church by Rev. Mr. Herrick continued to flourish. Both churches have continued for more than half a century, the former Baptist and the Methodist churches having been removed to Attica.

On the 18th, of June 1812, a declaration of war was announced against Great Britain. This town, with all the frontier towns, was supposed to lie open to immediate depredations from Canada, and especially from the Indians. Some, weak knees, left for places of safety, some volunteered to defend their country; several of the early settlers went into the war for six months, three years, or during the war, and some went into the Regulars for five years, among whom were Joseph Farnham, Justin Loomis, Alva Wood, (wounded at Queenstown and died), Walter Burnham, John Tolles, Abel Baker, — Boam, and some others. So large a number being withdrawn from a new community, left but few to till the soil; but our Mothers, profiting by the example of their Mothers of the Revolution, followed or led their sons into the corn and potato fields and plied the hoe with a will if not with the dexterity of an expert.

During such a state of things, the forests were not much thinned, roads were not much improved, nor much needed, and a pretty general state of quiescence existed.

No new settlers coming into town, the country began to feel the want of a market, and as bankbills could not be used, and bills of exchange could not be had on England or her provinces, the specie of the country was hoarded up or was bought up by speculators, to be used illegitimately in a traffic with our enemies. This left the country nearly without any circulating medium. Transactions of business began to be done in kind. A's note would be given for a specified number of bushels of wheat, etc., or payable in stock or labor. A man would be hired to be paid in grain or stock. This continued for several years. By making stock etc. supply the place of a circulating medium, it was kept in the country and became depressed in value, and but for the drain by the war the country would have become overstocked. Cows were bought and sold at eight or ten dollars; a good yoke of cattle would change owners for $40. All kinds of foreign goods were very high and could be had only for necessities. Farmers raised the wool and flax which were wrought into clothing by their wives and daughters. The maple forest supplied their sugar, and burnt grain or peas their coffee. Very little was bought of the merchant but tea and tobacco and very sparingly of them. The super-abundant herbage in the forests furnished a ready pasturage for all the cattle, and old Brindle's sure return at night an abundant supply of milk. With a carding machine in town and a clothier's shop near by, with Capt. Jones' tannery and a shoe shop, we were an independent people.

The war on the frontier continued to absorb every other interest; we were so near that we could hear the morning and evening guns. So many of the settlers were gone to the war and elsewhere, that bears and other rapacious animals, taking advantage of the absence of the hunter, had become very bold in depredating on the farmer's grain and swine. Lads of a dozen summers often went out to drive them away from the swine. This was easily done with a blazing fire brand.

Long yarns of Indian atrocities in the Revolution, were occasionally spun by some of our grandpas, keeping the Juveniles in continual state of alarm. An epidemic disease also prevailed to an alarming extent, every house being visited by the complaint, and many families suffered the loss of part of their households.

To complete our disasters, on the 30th of December a British force of about 1000 men landed at Buffalo, captured the place and spread alarm throughout all western New York. The militia that had been provided to guard Buffalo, fled at the first fire. Many of them bringing off their guns without discharging them, came skedaddling 27 miles through the woods with the enemy, in expectation, at their heels, causing consternation among the settlers by their fright and their wild and extravagant stories, some declaring that the British Regulars and the Canadian Indians were but a short distance behind and were in full pursuit. Although it is probable they had not had sufficient courage to look at an enemy in any direction, it spread a general panic among the settlers, and a general stampede commenced. Every man or woman who had two draft animals (or one if not more) put them in immediate requisition, with such vehicles as could be had. Some were improvised for the occasion and were rude enough indeed, and a general escape commenced; in consequence of which the year 1814 saw the town without inhabitants, with but a few exceptions. Some of the fleers remained absent most of the winter but the great part, nearly all, within three or four days had returned, reoccupying the old domiciles, and did not allow themselves to be again disturbed by flying reports during the continuance of the war. Yet, during the panic, not a soldier who had enlisted from Bennington, left his post.

Quiet was restored by the return of the British to their own dominions. The people of the town resumed their ordinary employments.

With the close of the year 1814, came also the close of the war with Great Britain. Attention was again turned to clearing off the forest. Such of our Soldier Boys as survived returned. The face of the country, as well as the faces of the settlers put on a new aspect.

"The Genesee Intelligencer" of 1807, "The Cornucopia," 1808, and "The Republican Advocate" of 1811, had circulated in town, by post riders, who arrived with the paper, generally within three days after they were published.

With the return of peace, and the thrift of the country, the want of a market began to be felt; surplus grain and stock was raised. Ashes were converted into potash, but there was no outlet except at an expense that would use up the profits. Wheat that would sell on the Hudson for $2, was nominally worth here four or five shillings.

At the close of the war the subject of the Erie Canal was again revived, and as the prospect of its success brightened the settlers were in ecstacies; and its completion ten years afterwards, did not in the least disappoint them in its beneficial results.

At the close of the year some cause had raised the price of wheat to two dollars per bushel at Buffalo. Encouraged by the report, a farmer who had raised a fine crop of wheat, went into his barn in the morning, commenced threshing wheat with horses on the floor, continuing through the day, returned his horses to the stable, began with his hand fan, by the light of his lantern to clean up the wheat and fit it for market. About sunrise in the morning he bagged forty bushels; he again harnessed his horses, loaded his wheat on the sleigh and started for market. He arrived at Buffalo at sundown, saw his team well cared for, sold his wheat, put his eighty silver dollars in his purse, again hitched up his team, and soon after dark started for home where he arrived before his family had done breakfast the next morning. He had in forty-eight hours, unaided except by his trusty team, threshed forty bushels of wheat, prepared it for market thirty-five miles distant, sold it and returned, ready, after a short nap, to again commence the ordinary employment of his farm. Such was the indomitable perseverance and energy of at least one of our first settlers, Col. Charles Chaffee.

1818. During this year several things of much local importance occurred. The town of Sheldon was formed from the town of Batavia in 1808, comprising seven townships including the town of Bennington; in 1811 Attica was set off, including Orangeville and Weathersfield; and now at the beginning of this year, March 6, 1818, Bennington was incorporated into a town by itself; and it has remained with its then and present boundaries for more than fifty years.

The Moscow and Buffalo road, laid in 1814, was this year partially opened through the town, and by its facilities, settlement commenced again in good earnest. But still further obstacles to rapid settlement were encountered. The high price of wheat in 1816 had induced every settler to put into wheat, in that and the following year, every acre that could be prepared for it. But when the crop was ready for market, there was no market ready for the crop. Heretofore the settler had required for home consumption all that was raised, but not so now.

However the want of a market was soon to be obviated. A canal was to be made. An act was passed in 1816 to make a survey of the Erie canal, and on the 4th of July, 1817, work actually commenced. All looked forward to the day when we would enjoy with the east the market of New York and perhaps of other countries. New life was given the pioneer; new settlers arrived; new lots were settled. Two trees were felled when only one was felled before. Many blades sprang up where none sprang before—wheat and grass instead of the leek; the corn leaf instead of the marsh-mallow.

About this time Trumbul Cary of Batavia, an estimable citizen of Genesee, commenced paying 20¢ per hundred for “blacksalts,” cash on delivery. This again the settler improved in clearing off the forests, as this was the only article of commerce within reach for which cash was paid. Lands were cleared of the timber for little more than the ashes, the indiscriminate axe and crackling fire scarcely sparing the basswood, cherry, ash or hemlock.

Nearly every lot in town had its log cabin and yet, except that purchased by the Gents Loomis, there was very little land in town which was deeded, the fee still remaining in the Holland Company, the settler holding under an "Article." Farms were cleared and fenced, log cabins and barns built, mills also, yes even the land on which the mills at Attica were built was not conveyed in fee until eleven years after they were erected.

There being still no market, no cash paid for produce, all business transactions were done in barter. Shoe makers, tailors, blacksmiths, school teachers, clergymen, and most other trades and professions were paid in grain if paid at all. Yes, even the marriage ceremony was sometimes said by Justices, for wheat. But one young man, more "noble" than others, carried four bushels of wheat five miles, and sold it to a settler who had just arrived in town, for one dollar, which he gave a clergyman for making him a happy husband. And well might he enjoy it for he obtained a lovely bride. Judge Loomis was elected to the legislature of this state, and while serving his district at Albany he sickened and died. He left a widow, the sister of the late David E. Evans of Batavia. The town mourned him as a father. His demise had much effect upon the prosperity of the town for several years.

1821. There were now seven sawmills and two flour mills in town, there were seven school houses, two frame and four log, having school some part of the year. There were also three church organizations—the Presbyterian, the Baptist and the Methodist.

Work on the Erie canal being in progress in this vicinity, employment was given to men and teams from this and adjoining towns. It furnished remunerating wages and brought returns in cash, which supplied almost immediately again a circulating medium: and the practice of making contracts to be paid in grain, stock or work, immediately ceased.

The system adopted by the Holland Company, of selling their land on long credit, and not even enforcing the contract when due, had given rise to carelessness or indifference on the part of the settlers; and even the interest on their lands was not paid. Consequently land purchased originally at 10 shillings per acre, had run up to three or four dollars. The burden of a great debt became an incubus on the settlers. Many began to feel they could not pay for the land their hard labor had rendered availing for agricultural purposes, and they did not like the idea of leaving their homes to others more fortunate. The Company saw the necessity of doing something to prevent the further accumulation of debt, and commenced taking stock and produce of the settlers, on their contracts. This had the effect in a measure, to alleviate the difficulty, and a few men paid for their farms. Previous to the amendment of the constitution, there were so few freeholders in town that the Democratic party found itself without a person, on that side, possessing the requisite property qualifications for a voter for Governor, etc., and consequently was without a challenger, the only freeholders in town being Federalists.

In 1814, a state road, the Moscow and Buffalo, was laid out by commissioners appointed by the Legislature. The road ran directly through town, but up to this time it had never been opened and worked; and such was the "penny wise, pound foolish" disposition of the small mind who managed the town affairs, that he refused any aid to, and opposed the opening of and working said road, exhibiting about the same amount of sagacity a slovenly farmer does, who neglects to fence his corn field on account of the expense of splitting the rails. The mountain ridge on the west side of the Tonawanda, forms an almost impassable barrier on the east, and the Indian Reservation was on the west, thus preventing access to, or egress from the town at other points than those existing when the above road was located. The small mind, before mentioned, believed that it was for his political reputation to "keep down the taxes." Improvements were therefore less active than would otherwise have been; and this same policy continued for many years.

In the spring of '25, the near completion of the Erie canal put new life into everything. The hitherto stagnant pools of trade and commerce were moved by the breezes from the Erie. The land if not shaken by an earthquake, was pretty thoroughly shaken by the plough share. The cast iron plough, which had been introduced in this country less than five years, had now come into general use. The unnatural prejudice against it having given way, it had become a thing indispensable; and well did its history prove its value.

1825. The completion of the Erie canal on the 26th of October this year, crowned the rejoicing of many old settlers, who, when the canal became a certainty, did not expect to live to see its completion. But they did live; and of such value and consequence was it, that any political party or leading political men who did not favor it, quickly found their political graves in western New York.

The canal was worth seeing, and many would travel the thirty intervening miles to get a view of it.

Grain which had heretofore been a drug on the market, now commanded cash at home. All our new lands produced good crops of wheat or corn, and longer under cultivation, produced other crops in abundance.

If the canal proved of great value to the state generally, and to the city of New York in particular, it was of incalculable value to western New York. It soon made the Little Village of Buffalo, reincorporated in 1822, a City in 1832. All the rural towns felt the new impetus of trade and internal commerce. The farmer's grain and stock commanded a ready market at home; drygoods merchants began to pay cash for farm production, and when the prudent housewife carried her chickens and eggs to market, she was not asked what she wanted for them, but when they were weighed or counted, the silver was laid on the counter before her. Lands raised in value. The settler who could not pay for his land, sold it to some more fortunate neighbor, or to new comers. Others began to make payments, and in the course of five or six years after the opening of the Erie, there were many farmers in town making improvements on their own lands. But for an unfortunate policy, adopted by the Hayden party in town, of keeping the value in the board of Supervisors, at the lowest possible point, and a general acquiescence in that policy, the land might have acquired a reputation fully equal to medium in the County.

The state school laws required three commissioners and three inspectors; to find six men in town who were qualified for that office was not an easy matter; consequently, our common schools, where most of the community began and finished their studies, were of a very low grade. Grammar was not taught at all, geography but imperfectly. Little attention was paid to any studies except reading, writing, arithmetic, and orthography. About this period better inspectors were appointed, better teachers employed, and our schools assumed a higher grade.

Several causes operated to retard improvement in town. The Indian Reserve lying directly on our western border, there were no roads opened as exits from the town in that direction, the west bank of the Tona-wanda, on the east was too precipitous to be passed except at one place near the northeast corner. The roads running north and south through the town, did not lead to any commercial market, so that the only entrance or exit was at the northeast and northwest corners. But by far the greatest hindrance to improvement was the credit system, adopted by the Holland Company. There were very few farms owned in fee by their occupants. This induced a slovenly and unthrifty method of farming. Many, perhaps a large majority, of the settlers began to fear they would never be able to pay for the land, and were liable at any time to be turned out of possession; consequently few or no orchards had been set out, and some that were, had been destroyed by cattle browsing in them. The log cabins were very poorly provided with any convenience for the comfort of the occupants; no barns of any description were built on many of the farms, no wells were dug, no chimneys were built in the houses, and no glass in the windows. The families brought water from the brook, lived in the dark and smoke, and their cattle and swine ran at large. The untoward reputation of the town, added to the "leveling down policy" of the Hayden party, had prevented the usual rise of land prices consequent on improvement; so that the amount due the Land Office was about equal to the price of the land. The settler, who had come into town young, with a strong will and a robust frame, found himself ready to leave, penniless, with perhaps a young and numerous family. The settlers felt they had made the value of the land by their improvements and were not willing to leave without some remuneration. Murmurings began to prevail and soon broke into open rupture. A mob sacked and pulled down the Land Office in Chautauqua County, and hundreds of persons marched in open day to Batavia for the same purpose. But better counsels prevailed, and all left for their homes with the intention of not being turned out of them without resistance. The Holland Company added fuel to the flame by selling many farms in town to heartless speculators, who attempted to remove the settlers by legal process. After a few such attempts, and after one of the heartless speculators and his assistants received a coat of tar and feathers, at the hands of the outraged settlers, better counsels prevailed on the other side, and this process was abandoned. By this time most of the settlers who could not pay for their farms, had sold their betterments for what they could get, to others. A better grade of inhabitants came in, and the place began to wear a better aspect.

1835. A better state of things began to be. The old log cabins (dear old things) gave place to substantial frame or brick dwellings. Framed barns took the place of former log shells, or arose where no substitute for a barn existed. The hay and grain were housed, domestic animals were also sometimes sheltered, and best of all the little ones and their amiable and kind mother, found themselves in a snug farmer's dwelling. New fences supplied the place of the old log or brush "apologies." Domestic animals were restrained within reasonable limits; the pigs and geese were not allowed in the house—no not even in the front yard—nor the hens allowed to make their roost in the attic, or their nests in the trundle bed. A better state of things altogether appeared.

The Tonawanda railroad which was to bring a market to our doors, and which had been chartered some years previously, through the cupidity of Batavians, was stopped at that village.

The railroad from Attica to Buffalo was chartered this year, 1837, and work soon after commenced, which was finally completed in 1841. The Tonawanda R. R. being completed, formed with others the first through line from New York to Buffalo; and thus gave us the benefit of a full market, the want of which had been felt from the earliest settlement in town.

1850. The incubus of debt, heretofore noticed, had now been very nearly disposed of. The Holland Company, after adopting several lenient measures, with but indifferent success to the settlers, and no benefit to their own finances, had sold out all their interest on the Purchase, to a Home Company. The settlers were enabled to liquidate their claims, or sold out to others who did so. The occupants now became the proprietors of the soil. The whole town now presented much more the appearance of thrift and improvement than it had done during the whole time since its first settlement.

1852-5. At this time there were but few of the families of the original settlers left in town. They had gone away or were deceased. The German population which commenced about 1843, began to multiply pretty rapidly, and at this time they comprised a large percentage of the population. Many of the lower class of Germans had sold their lands to others and had gone away; a better class of inhabitants began to be apparent. The lands they occupied were well tilled; every nook and corner were occupied, swamp lands were drained, and the land was given nearly a garden tilth. Roads too were much improved during this decade.

A REMINISCENCE:

Early in the spring of the year 1805, a settler in the prime of life, accompanied by his son, (the author), a lad of five summers, might have been seen on a beautiful May morning, in the forest in the northern part of the town. Nature had commenced to put on her spring and summer dress. Wild flowers filled the woods with their beauty and the air with their fragrance. While the parent had been admiring the appearance of the country, in its primeval state, the lad had been filling his hands with the wild flowers. The promiscuous intermixture of white and red, the modest and retiring violet with the mandrake and the leek, formed in his estimation, a bouquet of no small importance. Thus employed or amused, they had arrived in the vicinity of the aforementioned "Redman's Broad Highway," and were seated on a large boulder, near the passage. At this place the path, in crossing a ravine made by Hemlock Brook, winds down one bank in a zigzag direction, and ascends the other in an oblique direction. While thus leisurely surveying the path and its surroundings, there suddenly broke on the view a long line of natives, crossing the ravine from east to west, led by the renowned chief, Red-Jacket, himself, followed by Horatio Jones, his interpreter, and a band of braves and warriors, dressed in war costume, armed with rifle or cross bows. Tall, erect and commanding in their aspect, they seemed to move in silence but with the regularity of machinery. They seemed not taken by surprise in the least, although passing within thirty feet of the boulder on which we sat, not an eye seemed to notice that any one but themselves was present. Their steady tramp continued, up the west bank, out of view. The lad inquired, "See there, papa, who are they? Where did they come from? Where are they going? Why didn't they speak? Did they see us?" And a thousand other questions that might have puzzled wiser heads than the lad's or his parent's.

Again it is May. The parent having long since gone to rest, the lad now grown older by half a century, is again seated on the boulder, the same, not another. A portion of the same Indian path is still in view. The same towering hemlocks, with their arrow-like shafts, seem destined to pierce the clouds. The same beech and basswood now, as fifty years previous, nearly shut out the light of day. The marks of the Redman's steps may still be seen on the small roots of the east bank. It needed but a small stretch of the imagination to recall the long lines of Natives, who for ages had traversed the forest, and to hear their steady tramp, traveling westward, traveling westward.

Tolles

The record of the Tolles Family that follows, or rather that part of it, down to and including Amos Tolles⁴, is taken from data and information compiled by Brainerd Tolles, and it is authentic, except where it states that the matter is in doubt.

From Amos Tolles⁴ down, to the end of the record, it is based on family records kept by James Sibley Tolles⁶; and is in all respects authentic.

The Colonial Records of Connecticut, Vol. 2, page 293, in an account of the Session of the General Court at Hartford, on October 23rd, 1676, makes mention of the granting by that Court, of a marriage divorce, to a Sarah Towle, on the grounds of desertion by her husband. (His name is not given.) On account of the different spelling of the name, it would appear improbable that the Sarah Towle thus mentioned was the wife of Henry Tolles¹.

The following statements in reference to said Henry Tolles² in Anderson's History of Waterbury, Conn., Vol. 1, pages 357-358.

Remarks:

JOHN TOLLES⁵ removed from Orwell, Vermont to what is now Bennington, Wyoming County, New York, then part of town of Batavia, Genesee County, N. Y., in 1802; coming on alone and taking up his land of the "Holland Land Company" at its Batavia Office; the land being located on lots, 2, 4, & 6 in section 3, Range 3, Township No. 10; and lying about two miles west of the present village of Attica, N. Y.

Part of said land, so taken up by John Tolles⁵ was continuously owned by him and his descendants until 1918 when it was sold by his great-grandson, Frank Porter Norton.

Late in the fall of 1802, he, John Tolles⁵, returned to the east; in February, 1803, he came on bringing his family and goods with him in an ox sled.

It was his nephew, Hiram Tolles, who was the "Lost Boy" of the Holland Purchase; Hiram Tolles, a boy of six years, in the summer of 1806, while watching the cows, near the edge of their clearing, wandered off into the woods and was lost. Large numbers of men were formed into searching parties, coming from Warsaw, Batavia, Genesee, and from even as far as Canandaigua, and for weeks searched the woods for him; but he was never found.

(See History of Wyoming County page 146; and Turner's History of the Holland Purchase.)

John Tolles⁵, was one of the five first settlers, of what is now Wyoming County, N. Y.; all of said five, came into the County, in the year 1802; they were: Zerah Phelps, in Attica, John Tolles⁵, Jacob Wright and Wm. Barber, in Bennington; and Jabez Warren, in Middlebury; all of which territory was then a part of the Town of Batavia, Genesee County, New York.

Both John Tolles⁵ and his wife, Catherine Sibley, were buried in the East Bennington Cemetery. In 1879 their remains were removed, by their son, James S. Tolles⁶, and re-interred in his lot in Forrest Hill Cemetery, Attica, N. Y.

John Tolles⁵ was a soldier in the war of 1812-14. He served in Capt. Gates Company, in the summer of 1812, New York Militia; and in Capt. John Hubbard's Co., Col. Vary's Regt. N. Y. Militia, from Sept. 1st to the 16th, 1814.

He received a pension from the U. S. Govt. for such service; such pension being granted March 1st, 1846.

He was baptized Feb. 19th, 1771, at New Canaan, N. Y., see Great Barrington, Mass. Episcopal Church records, and New Haven Genealogical Magazine, Vol. 8, page 1844.

JAMES SIBLEY, of Sutton, Mass., the father of Catherine Sibley, who was the wife of John Tolles⁵, was a soldier in the Revolutionary War; he enlisted as a private, in Capt. Reuben Sibley's Co., Col. Josiah Whitney's Regt., in July, 1778; and was in the service, both in Rhode Island and Massachusetts. See Massachusetts Soldiers and Sailors in War of Revolution, Vol. 14, page 194.

John¹ Sibley, the first Sibley American ancestor, came from England in the fleet in 1629. He settled at Salem, Mass. Became a freeman May, 1635; was Selectman of the town of Salem, and a Member of the General Court, Boston; m., Rachel dau. of Lawrence Leach, of Salem; died 1661; he had 5 daughters and 4 sons.

About, or soon after the close of the Revolutionary War, he removed from Sutton to Western Mass. and later to Vermont.

Catherine⁶, dau. James⁵ and Sarah? Putnam Sibley; b., at Sutton, Mass. July 9, 1774; m., John Tolles, son of Amos & Elizabeth Tolles, March 20, 1797; died June 11, 1850.

EDWARD DOTY¹, came to America in the Mayflower, landing at Plymouth, Massachusetts, November 11th, 1620, (old style).

He was at that time a young man of 18 or 20 years of age; and is described in the ship records, as a London youth.

He was apprenticed to Stephen Hopkins, and came to America as a member of Hopkins' family.

He was the 40th signer of the "Mayflower Compact".

He was a private in the military company of Plymouth, Mass.

For a very full and interesting article on Edward Doty¹, his ancestors, etc., see Part 2 of "Signers of the Mayflower Compact" page 32, by Annie Arnoux Haxtoun; these pamphlets can be found at the New York Public Library, and at the Grovesnor Library, Buffalo, N. Y.

The facts about the "Mayflower" immigrants are these: This ship carried only about one hundred passengers. Several of these men were of noble families, namely, Miles Standish, John Alden, John Carver, and his secretary, Edward Winslow, Samuel Fuller, Stephen Hopkins, Isaac Allerton, etc., while Elder Brewster and William Bradford were eminent scholars.

A few names appeared on the passenger list as servant, weaver, tinker, etc., but they were educated men who were obliged to serve in some capacity in order to be accepted among the limited number.

Edward Doty¹ is spoken of in the early records of Plymouth Colony, as being a man of violent temper; who was frequently engaged in litigations.

He and Edward Lister, were the principals in the first duel fought at Plymouth Colony.

The "List of each Inhabitant and his Provisions" made in 1711, gives "Jonathan Wright, bacon, 48; wheat, 135; rye, 85."

History of Flushing, 251.

And "A List of the Officers and Soldiers belonging to the Company of Jonathan Wright, Captain; 1715," begins "Captain Jonathan Wright" and then names nearly 75 other officers and privates.

See History of Flushing, 253, and the military documents on file in Albany there cited.

The will of "Jonathan Wright³, Senior," of Flushing, Queens Co., dated Oct. 11, 1742, was proved in New York City, March 9, 1743-4, and is recorded in New York County Surrogate's Court in liber 15 of wills, at page 186. In it he names his wife, "Wyntie", and daughters, Elizabeth Wheeler, Catherine Griffen, Sarah and Susannah Wright; and gives all his property to them; he appointed Capt. Wm. Thorn and John Embree, Sen., executors thereof. He did not mention his sons, Jonathan, Junior, and Benjamin, therein. In the body of the will he designates himself, and he signs it also, as "Jonathan Wright, Senior."

The will of his widow, "Winefred Wright," of Flushing, Queens Co., widow," dated October 24, 1744 (probably should read 1743), proved in New York City, February 5, 1744, recorded in New York County Surrogate's Court, in liber 15 of wills, at page 333, names her daughters, "Elizabeth Wheeler, Catherine Griffen, Sarah and Susannah Wright," giving them all of her property, and appoints her daughter Susannah and John Field, executors. She did not mention her sons, Jonathan, Junior, and Benjamin, therein; but her son Benjamin, was one of the witnesses to her will. This will establishes that the name "Wine" given in the "List of Inhabitants of Flushing" of 1698, supra, as wife of "Jonathan Wright, Junior," and "Wyntie" given in the will of Jonathan Wright³, supra, were pet names, and that "Wine," "Wyntie," and "Winefred Wright, widow," was one and the same person.

BENJAMIN WRIGHT⁴.

Son of Jonathan³ and Winefred Wright.

Born at Flushing, L. I., about 1710-1715.

Married Elizabeth Allison, about 1739-1740. She was bapt. Aug. 22, 1736, by Rev. E. Prime. See Rec. of 1st Ch. Huntington, p. 32.

Died at Huntington, L. I., forepart of year 1770.

Children, probably all born at Huntington, L. I.:

- II. WINEFRED, b., April 12, 1745; bapt., Mch. 2, 1757; m., Jotham Post, April 20, 1763; d., May 29, 1811.
- III. MARY, b.,.....; bapt., Mch. 2, 1757.
- IV. CHARITY, b., Sept., 1750; bapt., Mch. 2, 1757; m., John Hallett, Apr. 12, 1780; d., Dec. 11, 1835.

- VII. SARAH, b., Oct. 16, 1755; bapt., Mch. 2, 1757; m., Samuel Carman, July 7, 1773.

BENJAMIN WRIGHT¹ left a will, dated February 18, 1765, proved in New York City, June 20, 1770, and recorded in liber 27 of wills, page 347, in New York County Surrogate's Court; in which he named his wife and all of his children. He divided his farm of 190 acres between his sons Allison and William, charging an annuity of 20 pounds to his wife, Elizabeth, and a legacy of 65 pounds to his daughter, Sarah, thereon; and giving legacies of 65 pounds each to his daughters, Elizabeth, Mary, and Charity; and directing that "my sons are to be put to trades as they shall choose," from which provision, and the further provision that his wife, Elizabeth, is "to have the improvement of it (the farm) until he (the son Allison) comes of age," it is evident that both sons were in 1765, when the will was executed, under the usual apprenticeship age, and probably William⁵ was quite young.

BENJAMIN WRIGHT⁴ was assessed 27 pounds 11 shill. on the Huntington Assessment roll for 1764. See Huntington Town Records, Vol. 2, p. 475.

BENJAMIN WRIGHT⁴ was one of the witnesses to the will of his mother, Winefred Wright, widow of Jonathan Wright³.

Letters of Administration on the estate of "Susannah Wright, late of Suffolk County, Spinster," were granted at New York City, by the Probate Court, June 7, 1768, to "Benjamin Wright of Suffolk County, brother and principal creditor of Susannah Wright." Said Letters are recorded in liber 3½ of Letters of Administration, page 559, in New York County Surrogate's Court. Jotham Post was one of the sureties on the bond given by Benjamin Wright as such administrator.

ALLISON WRIGHT and MELESCENT HALSEY were married July 7, 1780. See Marriage Bonds, Vol. 29, page 107. ("Names of Persons for whom marriage licenses were issued by Sec'y of Province of N. Y. previous to 1784.")

"CORNELIUS HALSEY of Westhampton, L. I., (son of Eph.⁴), married Millicent, dau. of Capt. Obadiah Rogers, their dau. Millicent, married Alison Wright, July 7, 1780. She died Sept. 17, 1795." Quoted from N. Y. Gen. & Bio. Rec., Vol. 34, page 284.

The New York City Business Directories for the years 1791-1793 give:

ALLISON WRIGHT, Butcher, 25 James St., and 1795 gives, ALLISON WRIGHT, Butcher, 96 James St.

On the Town Records of the Town of Huntington, Vol. 3, page 36, it appears that Allison Wright took the Oath of Loyalty to King George in 1778. Also in such records, Vol. 3, at page 93, in the list of property owners, and assessment of property, for year 1782, is "Ellison Wright assessed 127 pounds."

ALLISON WRIGHT, July 3, 1783, filed a claim for property taken by British troops in Revolutionary War, during years 1776-7-8-80-81, aggregating over 75 pounds. See Vol. 3, Huntington Town records, Appendix, pages 15-26.

- VI. MARGARET, b., Jan. 2, 1814; m., John Pierce; lived in Buffalo, N. Y.; had William W. Pierce, he married and had John, William, and Margaret, (she married James Franklin).

Much of the above data is taken from the records kept in the family Bible belonging first to William Wright⁵, then to his son William Wright⁶, then to his granddaughter, Harriet S. VanDake, and now to his great granddaughter, Ellen C. (Wright) Norton.

WILLIAM WRIGHT⁵, the son of Benjamin Wright,⁴ farmer, and Elizabeth Allison Wright, his wife, of Huntington, Suffolk County, Long Island, was born at Huntington prior to 1755. Allison, who married Melescent Halsey, was his brother, and Elizabeth, Winefred, who married Jotham Post, Mary, Charity, who married John Hallett, and Sarah, who married Samuel Carman, were his sisters. He removed to New York City while still a youth or in very early manhood. Probably he was apprenticed to Jotham Post, husband of his sister Winefred, who was a butcher, carrying on his trade in New York City. He is first mentioned in the records of New York County in a deed dated Sept. 19, 1785, executed Aug. 19, 1790, by Nicholas Bayard to "William Wright, Butcher," recorded Sept. 7, 1790, in Book No. 46 of Deeds, page 258, New York County Register's Office, which deed conveyed 3 lots on the northwest corner of Bayard and Catherine (later Mulberry) streets. During the period between 1789 and 1817 there were a number of conveyances recorded in the New York County Register's office in which William Wright⁶ is either the grantee or the grantor; he is named in all such "William Wright, Butcher." By a deed dated March 11, 1817, he and Margaret, his wife, conveyed two of the above mentioned Bayard St. lots, being the one on the corner of Bayard and Mulberry streets, and one next to it, for a consideration of $10,000.00, to his son, "William Wright⁶, Junior, Tallow Chandler," which deed was recorded in the New York County Register's office, in liber 125 of Deeds, page 557, April 18, 1818.

The entry of the marriage of "William Wright⁵, Butcher," and Margaret Marsh, March 15, 1788, appears on the records of the 1st Presbyterian Church of New York, see Vol. 12, N. Y. Gen. & Bio. Rec., page 137.

The Business Directories of New York City, (in New York Public Library), for the years 1789 to 1817, inclusive, 27 in all, each names him as "William Wright, Butcher" of "Bayard Street" or of "Bayard and Mulberry Streets."

Letters of Administration on the estate of "Allison Wright, late of the City New York, Butcher, deceased," were granted by the New York Probate Court, Feb. 29, 1796, to "William Wright, a Brother, and Jotham Post, a Friend." See Liber 5, Letters of Administration, page 67, New York County Surrogate's Court.

The History of New York City Markets, makes frequent mention of William Wright⁵, and states that "William Wright, Butcher," had a stall at "Fly Market" for many years.

The above record, as to births, marriages and deaths, is taken from family records.

WILLIAM WRIGHT⁶ was a Quaker, and was very strict in his family in the observance of the teachings of that sect.

While he resided in New York City he was engaged in business as a Tallow Chandler; and he owned a farm on Long Island. He went from New York City to Henrietta, N. Y., in 1836, where he purchased and located on a farm a short distance north of East Henrietta on the road running from that hamlet to Rochester, N. Y.

WILLIAM WRIGHT⁶ conveyed the property at Bayard and Mulberry streets, New York City, that his father, William Wright⁵, had conveyed to him in 1817, by two deeds. The first, executed March 31, 1825, by "William Wright, Jr., Tallow Chandler, and Mary (Miller) his wife, to Isaac Pickford," conveys "part of the lots conveyed by Nicholas Bayard to William Wright, Sr." "corner of Bayard and Mulberry Sts. the house being known as No. 94 Bayard St." and "by William Wright, Sr., conveyed to William Wright, Jr." Such deed is recorded in New York Co. Register's Office in liber 188 of Deeds, page 578; James Wright, brother of grantor, witnessed the deed and made oath to the identity of the grantors.

The second of said deeds was executed Sept. 23, 1835, by "William Wright, Tallow Chandler, and Elizabeth Ann (Briggs), his wife," conveyed the remaining land on Bayard St., described therein as "part of the lots conveyed by Nicholas Bayard to William Wright, Sr., and by William Wright, Sr., to Wm. Wright, Jr.," which deed was witnessed by Elijah Briggs, of 37 Walker St., brother of said Elizabeth Ann Wright, who made oath to the identity of the grantors therein; that deed was recorded in New York County Register's Office, in liber 336 of Deeds at page 571.

THE COGSWELL HOMESTEAD, GILMANTON IRON WORKS, N. H. BUILT IN 1779.

Cogswell

The following list of one line of descendants of John Cogswell, is based upon, and largely quoted verbatim from "The Cogswells in America" by E. O. Jameson, published in 1884. Alfred Mudge & Son, Printers, 24 Franklin St., Boston.

"THE COGSWELLS IN ENGLAND"

"It is the family tradition of the Cogswells, now holding the ancient Cogswell possessions in Westbury, County of Wilts, England, that their ancestors came from the County of Essex, and were known as Coggeshall. Besides the family tradition, experts in such matters say that Cogswell and Coggeshall in England have the same origin.

The name was probably derived from the old English town of Coggeshall; which is located 44 miles from London in the County of Essex. Coggeshall was the ancient canonium of the Romans, and held by them for several centuries, as a military trading post; being surrendered only on their departure from England.

In the time of the Saxons, it was called Coed Garr's Hall. When Canute the Dane ruled England, Godwin, one of his favorites, who lived also under Edward the Confessor, whose daughter married Edward the Confessor, her son being King Harold, last of the Saxon kings, came into possession of Coggeshall.

In 1046, Coggeshall was given to the Church of Christ for the support of the Benedictine Monks of Canterbury.

In 1139, the Abbey of Coggeshall was founded by King Stephen and Queen Matilda. The Monks being of the Cisterine Order. The first Abbot of Coggeshall was William."

Robert Cogswell and Alicia Cogswell were the grand parents of John Cogswell¹, lived in Westbury Leigh, County of Wilts, England.

He was a manufacturer of woollen cloths. Aside from that nothing is known of him. The Register of the Parish gives the date of his burial as June 7, 1581. The date of his wife's death is given by said Register as Aug. 1, 1603.

Their children were: Robert, Richard, Stephen, Joane (she married Freestone), Margaret (married Franklene), Margery (married John Whateley), Edith (married Thos. Stevens) and Edward (married Alice).

Robert Cogswell left a will dated June 1, 1581, which was proved in Probate Court, London, July 14, 1581, in which he mentions all of his children, and of which he appoints his wife, Alice, executrix.

Edward Cogswell, son of Robert and Alice Cogswell, and father of John Cogswell¹, the American Immigrant, was born in Westbury Leigh, County of Wilts, England. He married Alice.

They resided in Westbury Leigh. He died in 1616; and his wife died the same year. He left a will, dated June 23, 1615; which was proved Jan. 12, 1616. She also left a will which was dated June 25, 1615; which was proved May 11, 1616.

Edward Cogswell, was a clothier, pursuing the business of his father and ancestors for generations. His estates were designated Ludbourne, Homingsham and Ripond Mylls.

Remarks:

JOHN COGSWELL¹, the ancestor of the Cogswell in America, at the age of 23, married the daughter of the Parish Vicar; succeeded to his father's business, that of clothier, and settled down in the old homestead. His parents died soon after his marriage; and he received by inheritance, "The Mylls, called Ripond, situate within the Parish of Frome Selwood" together with the home place. He was a manufacturer of woolen fabrics, largely broadcloths and kerseymeres, for the manufacture of which his "mylls" had a favorable reputation. He probably had a commission house in London where he sold his manufactures, as he was sometimes called a London merchant.

In 1635, he sold his "mylls" and other property and with his wife and eight children, and all their personal effects, embarked at Bristol, England, May 23, 1635, on the ship called the "Angel Gabriel" for New England. Their passage was long and disastrous. Their ship was wrecked on the coast of what is now Maine; and they were washed ashore from the broken decks of their ship, in the terrific storm of Aug. 15, 1635, at Pemaquid (Maine).

They escaped, with their lives, but were well drenched; and Mr. Cogswell lost personal property and valuables to the amount of five thousand pounds sterling.

However, they were more fortunate than some of the others, several of whom were drowned; among those drowned, is supposed to have been Sir Walter Raleigh.

Mr. Cogswell removed his family to Ipswich, Massachusetts; and in 1636, he received a grant of 300 acres of land and also a parcel of 8 acres of land on which he built a home.

March 3rd, 1636, by an Act of the Court, John Cogswell, was admitted freeman.

- X. SARAH, b., Feb. 3, 1668; m., Nov. 6, 1685, Wm. Rogers.

Remarks:

WILLIAM COGSWELL² was quite prominent in the religious matters of his town; and largely through his efforts, the Parish of Chebacco was established.

In 1675-6-7, occurred a famous lawsuit between him and his nephew, John Cogswell, over the settlement of the estate John Cogswell, father of said nephew; said William Cogswell² having been appointed executor of the will of said elder John Cogswell. The action was tried in the lower Courts and appealed through the intermediate Court to the Court at Boston, which reversed the judgment, which said John Cogswell had recovered against William Cogswell².

William Cogswell² left a will, which was proved, Dec. 19, 1700. In the will, he states that his wife is dead; and mentions four sons and four daughters.

Remarks:

NATHANIEL COGSWELL⁴ was but three years old when his father died. He went from home in his boyhood and entered a store in Haverhill, Mass. He became a leading merchant and prominent citizen of the town. After a successful business life, he retired in 1766, and settled upon a farm in Atkinson, N. H.

During the Revolutionary War, his patriotism was declared by large loans of money, to provide equipment and provisions for the soldiers. These loans, by reason of a depreciated currency, proved almost a total loss. Besides providing money he gave eight sons to the army, all of whom served with distinction; and who fulfilled an aggregate term of service of more than thirty-eight years. Said to be the longest rendered by any family in the country. They all survived the war, and became prominent in professional and civil life.

The last survivor of this large family was Joseph Cogswell, M. D., who died in 1851.

The following is a bill of sale (a copy), which proves that Nathaniel Cogswell⁴ was not an Abolitionist, viz.:

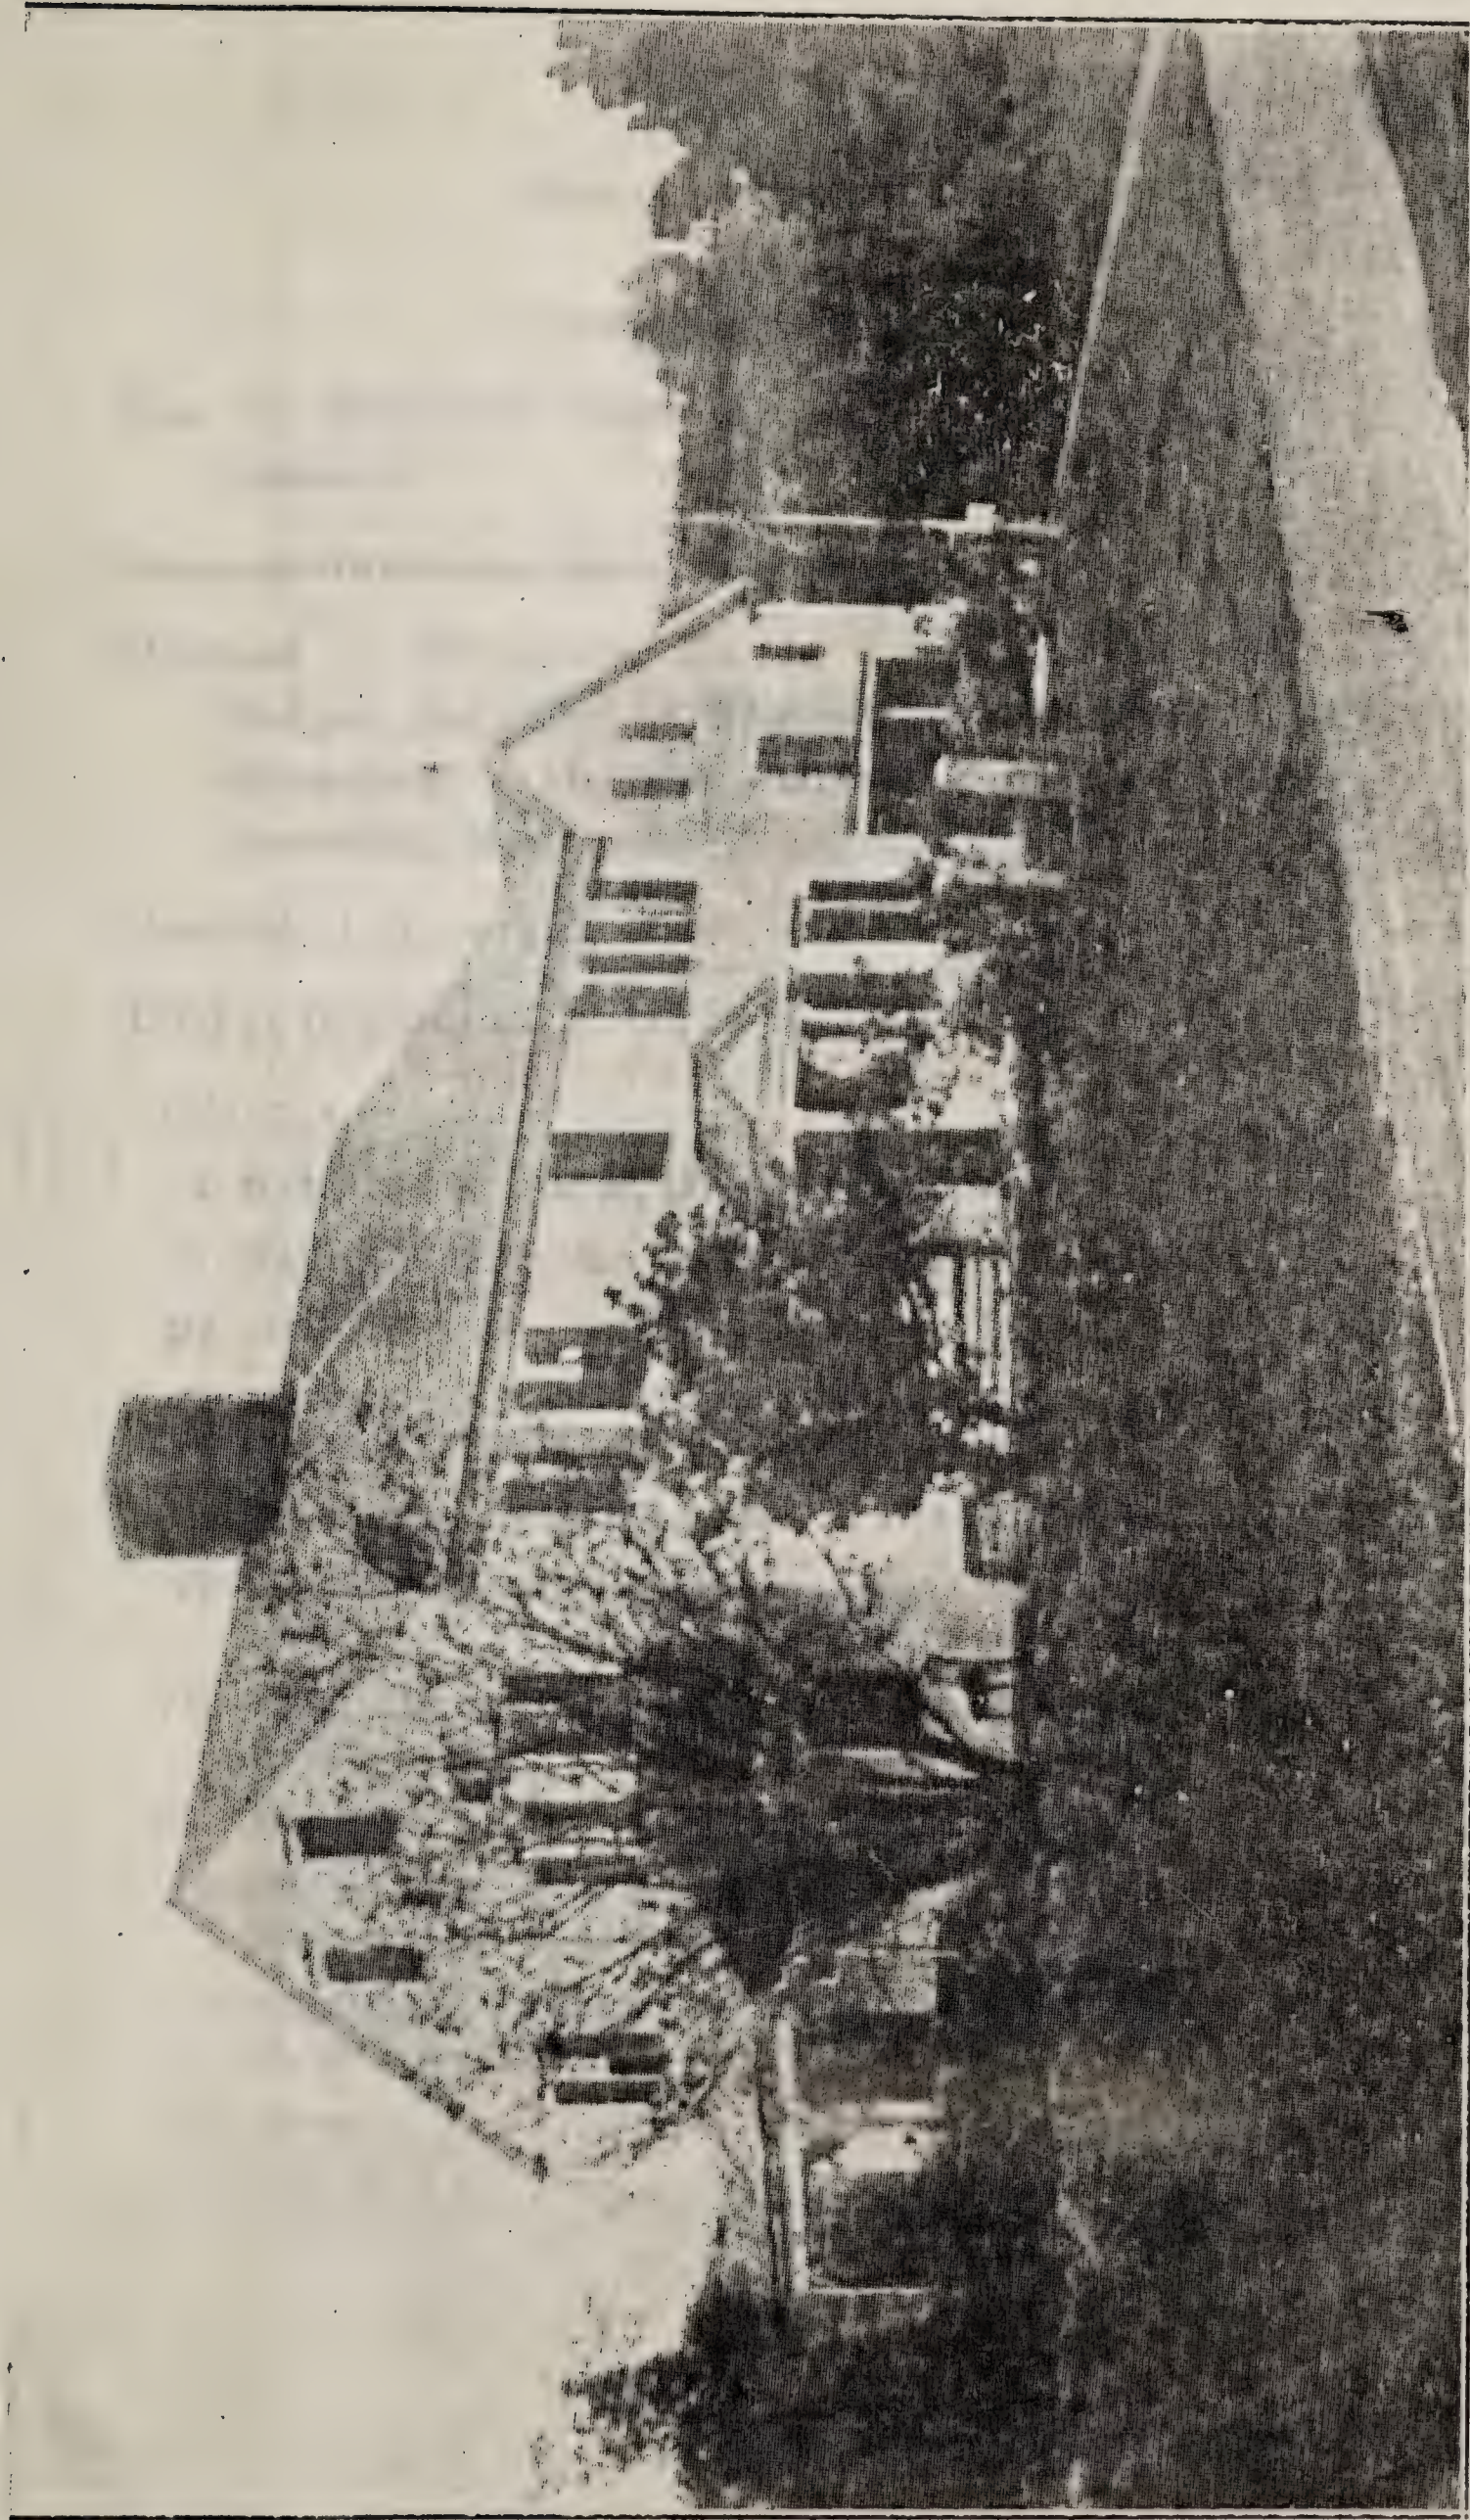

"Know all men by these presents; That I, Nathl. Cogswell, of Haverhill, in the County of Essex, and Province of Massachusetts Bay, in New England, trader, for and in consideration of one hundred and fifteen pounds to me in hand paid, do make over and sell and convey to Saml. Phillips, Jr., of Andover, Trader, my negro, Cesar, mentioned above and in the face of this bill of sale.

This I do as fully, freely and absolutely as may be. Moreover I do thereby oblige myself to warrant and defend said negro, from ye lawful claims and demands of any person or persons, whatsoever, to ye above Saml. Phillips, during said negro's life.

As witness my hand and seal.

NATHANIEL COGSWELL."

John Buck."

He was present at the organization of the Society of Cincinnati and an original member of that order. (See the "Cogswells in America," pages 99 & 240.)

The following is a letter written by General George Washington relative to a dispute as to the rank of the then Major Thomas Cogswell:

"I certify that in the dispute of rank between Majors Hull and Cogswell, which was ultimately in favor of the former, there was no personal preference to Major Hull, but that his succession to the vacant Lieutenant-Coloneley depended solely upon the established principles of promotion, he having been considered as an elder Major than Major Cogswell from the time of the new arrangement of the army in 1777. And I do further certify that Major Cogswell has been always, represented to me as an intelligent, brave, and active officer."

"Given at Headquarters at New Windsor, the 7th of Jan., 1781.

(Signed) "GEORGE WASHINGTON."

The above letter is quoted from "The Memorial of Major Thomas Cogswell to The Honorable Continental Congress."

Dudley

THE CONNECTICUT DUDLEYS.

The following data, with reference to WILLIAM DUDLEY, of Guilford, Conn., the first of his branch of the family, and his descendants, and items of interest pertaining to them, down as far as Darling Darling Dudley⁶, are taken from the "History of the Dudley Family" pages 341 to 367, written by Dean Dudley, of Wakefield, Mass., and published by him; A. W. Brownell, printer, Wakefield, Mass. Said History is in the New York City Public Library.

Wm. Dudley¹, born at Richmond, formerly Sheen, in Surrey, Eng., came to Guilford, Conn., from the town of Guilford, some thirty miles from London, in the County of Surrey.

He was married to Miss Jane Lutman, by Rev. Henry Whitfield, Rector of Ockley, in Surrey, Eng., Aug. 24th, 1636, according to the parish register of Ockley.

He and his wife, Jane, came over to America with Rev. Henry Whitfield as members of the Eaton & Hopkins expedition to Connecticut. They sailed from London, Eng., May 20th, 1639.

He was one of the signers of the "Plantaceon Covenant" which was prepared and signed while the party was at Sea, and which reads:

“COVENANT”

“We, whose names are hereunder written, intending, by God’s gracious permission to plant ourselves, in New England, and, if it may be, in the southerly part about Quinipiack: We do faithfully promise, each to each for our selves and families and those that belong to us; that we will, the Lord assisting us, sit down and join ourselves together in one entire plantation; and to be helpful each to the other in every common work, according to every man’s ability and as need shall require; and we promise not to desert or leave each other or the plantation, but with the consent of the rest, or the greater part of the company who have entered into this engagement.

As for our gathering together in a church way, and the choice of officers and members to be joined together in that way, we do refer ourselves until such time as it shall please God to settle us in our plantation.

In witness whereof we subscribe our names, the first day of June 1639.

Robert Kitchell, William Plano, Francis Bushnell, Francis Chatfield, John Hughes, William Leete, Thomas Naish, John Parmelin, John Jurdon, Henry Doude, Henry Whitfield, John Stone, John Bishop, Abraham Cruttenden, Richard Guttridge, Thomas Norton, William Chittenden, William Halle, William Dudley, Thomas Joanes, Henry Kingsnorth, John Mephram, William Stone, Thomas Cooke, John Hoadley.”

They landed at New Haven, Conn., being the first ships, for they had two, to enter that harbor, about July 10th, 1639.

After the leaders of the party had made investigation, as they could, to find a desirable location, on Sept. 29th, 1639, they purchased of the Indians the land and located thereon, the settlement called Guilford, Conn., naming the settlement after Guilford, the County Seat of Surrey County, Eng., from which many of them came.

Immediately after the land was purchased and the site located, the settlers began the erection of houses for their homes and pushed the work so rapidly, that all were housed before the cold weather set in.

William Dudley¹, and his young wife, established themselves and built their home on what is now Fair Street in the Village of Guilford, Conn., their place, or home lot, contained $3\frac{3}{4}$ acres.

David Dudley Field, D.D., in a letter dated July 2nd, 1849, written to Dean Dudley, said:

“I am descended on the maternal side from William Dudley, one of the first settlers of Guilford, Conn.

There is a tradition among the Guilford Dudleys, that their ancestor, William Dudley, was a relative of Governor, Thomas Dudley, of Massachusetts. They may have been remotely connected, though of this I have no certain evidence.

There is also a tradition, among the Guilford Dudleys, that their American ancestor, William Dudley, lived at Richmond, formerly Sheen, near London, (which may perhaps have been the case for a time, though I found no record of him at Richmond), and that he belonged to the Dudley family who figured much in history, or was sprung from the same stock they were."

A gentleman, signing his name, H. A. Butcher, in "London Notes and Queries" 3rd series, Vol. X, page 147, says

"A Wm. Dudley, who was married to a Jane Lutman, went to America in 1637 (should be 1639), Wm. had brothers, Edward, Daniel, and David.

A family of Lutmans lived at Wysborrowe Green, Sussex; "temp" of Elizabeth."

WILLIAM DUDLEY¹.

Son of Dudley and Dudley.

Born at Richmond, formerly Sheen, in Surrey, England.

Married at Ockley, in Surrey, England, Aug. 24th, 1636, Jane Lutman, by Rev. Henry Whitfield, according to the parish register.

Resided at Richmond, Eng., Ockley, Eng., Guilford, Eng., and Guilford, Connecticut.

Remarks:

WILLIAM DUDLEY¹, was a farmer, as appears by his will, and the inventory of his estate.

His will, dated Dec. 22nd, 1676, and a codicil thereto, dated July 25th, 1683, were admitted to probate (probably at New Haven), and an inventory of his estate filed.

He made his mark to his will; but that does not prove that he could not write, as he might of been too sick to write; and his name appears to have been signed in full "William Dudley" to the "Plantaceon Covenant" or Compact which was signed by the original settlers of Guilford, Conn., a copy of which is set forth on a previous page.

Prior to coming to America, William Dudley¹, and his wife had been members of Rev. Mr. Whitefield's Church and congregation; and they continued to be members of his church, or the one he founded and established after coming to America.

William Dudley¹ was elected to, and held the office of Representative to the General Court, for Guilford, Conn.; and he held several other offices.

JOSEPH DUDLEY², was a lifelong resident of Guilford, Conn. He was a cooper, a farmer and also owned a saw mill which he bequeathed to his son Caleb Dudley³. He was a free-man, at Guilford, in 1669. He was chosen Deputy to the General Court for several years; and was Town Clerk of Guilford for the years 1706-7.

The inventory, filed by them, shows that deceased left an estate valued at 2108 pounds.
